NOBLESSE OBLIGE.

PREFACES, it is said, are rarely read. This one will be, if for no other reason than to see what possible apology the author can have, or give, for attempting a segregation, much less a definition, of the Society of San Francisco and vicinity. It is rather an odd and interesting undertaking. The Bostonian can go back with his lineage to the ragged refugees who landed on Plymouth Rock; the New Yorker can trace his aristocratic blood direct to the Dutch market gardener knocking about among the cabbage patches of Manhattan Island; the Virginian is proud of his pedigree direct from the gentle dame sold on the auction-block in Jamestown for plug tobacco; the Louisianan can still see, beneath his tingling finger-tips, the tinge of the Creole tide; the Carolinian tells of the Huguenot parent driven from pillar to post; the Washingtonian can prate of the beauty and the chivalry developed by the politician's potent touch, and Kentucky's proud flesh, as we all know, is nothing but blue grass; but where in the name of reason, and research, is the fountain-head of Californian refinement and respectability? Pending the solution of the problem the reader's attention is respectfully and hopefully directed to the contents of this little volume, termed, for the want of a more fitting title, an "Élite Directory." It is simply a thing of convenience—a society handy-volume—a book of reference, written and compiled and published without any intention to draw any hard and fast lines of respectability or fashion, or to discriminate in any way between the social rights or position of our people. To attempt this would be invidious—would be a folly—

“ To gild refined gold, to paint the lily,
To throw a perfume on the violet,
To smooth the ice, or add another hue
Unto the rainbow, or with taper light
To seek the beauteous eye of heaven to garnish,
Is wasteful and ridiculous excess.”

So, too, would be an attempted definition of polite society. And thus it comes that nothing more is claimed for this book than a pretty fair surrounding of the social element. The club and association lists represent, as impartially as anything possibly could, the literary, artistic and social features of our every-day life. The “Army and Navy,” and “Hotel,” and “Special Calling and Address Lists” contain a majority of those of our people entitled to the claim and recognition of “Society,” if such a fixed fact there be. As a matter of course, perfection in this list is impossible. “Society” is altogether too elastic and nimble a thing to get hold of. But its representation is as select, and complete, and correct, as careful inquiry can make a first attempt of this kind. The club and society lists are official. So are the hotel lists. The army and navy and special calling and address pages have been made up from a dozen or more party and ball, and public and private reception lists, subject to a hundred revisions by as many prominent and well-informed society people. If, therefore, there are any—and undoubtedly there are many—entitled to mention therein whose names have by chance been omitted, it must be attributed rather to the difficulties attending the obtaining of information than to the idea, which will naturally arise, of deliberate exclusion. Next season the matter will be better understood, and a more perfect and satisfactory representation reached. As it has been found impossible in all cases to definitely locate some people, owing to their migration between city and suburban residences and hotel, and as changes of address are matters of daily and weekly occurrence, the address lists have been so arranged that corrections and additions can readily be made. A memoranda is also provided for the making of private address, and calling and invitation lists, sacred to the opinion, and the eyes, and the purposes of its possessor. The theatre diagrams are copies of the box-office sheets officially corrected, and will be found a great convenience to amusement-goers in the matter of locating seats. The summary of points of etiquette will serve as a handy jog to polite memory and breeding. Taken altogether, it is hoped that the Directory will be found valuable as a reference, useful as a guide, and interesting as a social souvenir. There is no particular apology to offer for its existence; no very superior quality claimed for its contents; no consolation that we can think of to offer the displeased; no object to achieve, unless it be a poor and humble place

“ With the memorials and the things of fame
That do renown this city.”

SAN FRANCISCO SOCIETY.

SOMETHING of the pioneer lingers in the manners of all communities that have grown suddenly into wealth and greatness. It is the same in San Francisco, though there is less of the frontier element in our social composition than we might expect when we remember our small beginnings and our rapid progress. We are the result of the mining camp, and of such rude force and skilled energy as commonly seeks fortune in untried regions. Our social life is rich in its coloring, but tropical in its rankness. Our earlier and our later life are sharply contrasted. When California became part of the nation, San Francisco was a wilderness of sand and chaparral, with a few respectable adobe houses and scattering huts dotting the peninsula at wide intervals. The population was Spanish, with a few adventurous traders from the East and from European countries. The De Haros, the Valencias, the Noes, and the Guerreros, lived in the little village that clustered about the Mission. The Castros, the Estudillos, the Vallejos, the Ainsas, the Bandinis, and the Noriegas, maintained rural state on ranchos scattered about the bay and at points in the interior. The social amusements were bull-fights and fandangos. Daily life was like the drowsy existence of the lotus-eaters. There was little more labor than was needed to procure the two essentials, food and shelter. This silence was rudely disturbed by the advent of noisy, fortune-seeking, gold-hunting Americans, who began to come in large numbers in 1849. Few women came with them. Those in pursuit of gold scattered to the mountains; those who desired to obtain wealth without delving for it, established themselves in trade, or sought labor in the city. Life in the mining-camps has been depicted vividly, if not always with strict fidelity, by Bret Harte, and has been described a thousand times in public prints and in discourses before Pioneer societies. Vice and crime flourished so rankly in the city as to make the swift judgment of the Vigilantes a blessing. The American women first seen in San Francisco were wives of soldiers. A few merchants' wives came in 1850, and a few more in 1851. Places to shelter them were not numerous. One of the first houses suitable for feminine entertainment was the hotel at the corner of Kearny and Commercial streets, kept by Messrs. Hart, Joyce & Sullivan, which was burned in the fire of 1851. In 1850, vessels landed at the wharf at the corner of Clay and Sansome, from which point the settlement extended westward up Clay, Washington and Sacramento streets. One of the first hotels which could pretend to be fashionable was the St. Francis, at the corner of Clay and Dupont, which furnished good entertainment and made extravagant charges therefor. It was not much patronized after 1852. At the corner of Pike and Clay was a hotel kept by Henry Gordon Walton, whose intellectual wife was the author of the poem read at the celebration of California's admission as a State, on the nineteenth of October, 1850. On the opposite corner was the Garrett House, kept by Zeke Wilson, afterwards landlord of the Portsmouth, on Portsmouth Square. These hotels entertained most of the male representatives of our aristocracy in the first two or three years of the city's history. The Oriental Hotel, a large and convenient place of public entertainment for those primitive days, was built in 1851 at the intersection of Bush, Battery and Market streets. For six or seven years it was the center of fashion and sociability. Among the ladies who were its permanent guests were Mrs. Ira P. Rankin, Mrs. R. J. Vande-

water, Mrs. Jacob Underhill, Mrs. Squire P. Dewey, Mrs. Garnett, Mrs. Henry Haight, Mrs. Robert Wakeman, Mrs. Frank Page, Mrs. A. A. Ritchie, Mrs. Henry Payson, and Mrs. Dr. Hitchcock, the mother of Mrs. Howard Coit. The Tehama House, at the corner of California and Sansome streets, where the Bank of California stands, was a rival of the Oriental Hotel, though having a different patronage. Its corridors were brightened by the uniforms of dashing army officers, and loud with the disputes of politicians. Captain U. S. Grant came from his post at Trinidad, in Humboldt county, and, unaware of his future greatness, in Mexican sombrero and serape smoked the pipe of peace in contented taciturnity on its front steps; and "John Phœnix," the first humorist of the Pacific Coast, was for a long time its respected guest. There were other army officers who were its frequent patrons; among them General Sherman, General Wool, General Clark, Colonel Anderson, Colonel Graham, Colonel Benjamin Beal—a great wit, Captain Whiting, Captain Folsom, Captain Gibson, Captain Burns, and H. A. Leonard, Army Paymaster for many years. The famous Mrs. Greenough and her daughter, and the handsome Mrs. Samuel Ward were guests of the Oriental during the winter of 1854. The Brannan House, at the corner of Bush and Sansome; the Rasette House, which stood on the site of the Cosmopolitan; and the International, at the corner of Kearny and Jackson streets, were more or less noted as abodes of wealth and elegance during the same period. None of these hotels ever achieved the position so long and so honorably maintained by the Oriental. The gay society of those early days danced to the music of the military and naval bands, had its assemblies, and listened, at Mr. Thomas Maguire's theatres, to the singing of Kate Hayes, Biscaccianti, and Madame Anna Thillon, and to the

ravishing strains of Ole Bull. The sexes were hardly in proportion, there being in attendance at these pioneer operatic performances perhaps one lady to twenty gentlemen. There were fashionable boarding-houses in the city, at which some of the bachelors of the period were entertained. At Mrs. Leland's, on California street, near Kearny, might be found Judge Botts, Judge Thornton, Governor Low, and Judge Hoffman; either then, or not long afterwards, the wearers of these titles. At Mrs. Pettitt's, next door, could be seen a pleasant set, of which Judge Heydenfeldt, Judge Woodruff, and Mr. Derby, a Boston gentleman of some fame, formed a part. An agreeable group of ladies and gentlemen made its headquarters at a large boarding-house built by Henry Meiggs, at the corner of Broadway and Montgomery streets. The list of guests and visitors included Charles Webb Howard, then a young Green Mountain boy, with face as round and red as a Vermont pippin; Edward Gould and his wife, A. J. Moulder, and Mr. and Mrs. Tobin. In 1852, society began to crystallize. Its first efforts at local aggrandizement were on Stockton street, north of Washington, where there remain several stately houses as relics of primitive grandeur. In this neighborhood lived Captain Macondry and his family. One of his daughters married James Otis, afterwards Mayor of the city, and another Horace Davis, now Member of Congress. Mr. Samuel Herman was one of the local magnates. His daughters, Alice, Louise, and Estelle, married, in the order named, Mr. Palmer of New York, Hall McAllister and Bernard Peyton. The reminiscences of the locality are numerous. Dr. Maxwell had a lovely daughter, one of the belles of the day, who died at eighteen. Milton S. Latham lived on Stockton street, and entertained as elegantly if not as profusely as in later years. Hubert Sanders, distinguished for his hospitality, sailed from this port for Honolulu in the "Elvira Herbeck," and was never heard of afterwards. His daughter, a great beauty, married Alfred Wheeler. They lived on Lombard street; and next them resided the Darlings, at whose house Miss Lizzie C. Fry was married to William C. Ralston. Other well-remembered people were denizens of the neighborhood; among them John Middleton and the Gwins, who were elegantly domiciled at Wozencraft's, a fashionable boarding-house at the corner of Stockton and Washington streets. Mrs. Hitchcock resided at the same house before moving to better quarters at the Oriental. The Virginia Block, a large building at the corner of Stockton and Pacific, was associated with early wealth and elegance. The skirts of fashion swept out over the adjoining regions, reaching even to North Beach. Signs of gentility were very early seen at the Kremlin Hotel, on Stockton near Broadway, which afterwards became St. Mary's Hospital. Prospect Place was inhabited by ladies and gentlemen of fashion, and Powell street for several blocks north of Clay had an air of gentility. There was a knot of stylish people gathered on California street, west of Stockton, in 1853 and 1854. At the corner of Prospect Place and California, resided Mrs. Henry L. Dodge and Mrs. T. C. Banks, and where David Porter's house stands was the cottage of Mrs. B. L. Brooks. All of these ladies were the wives of well-to-do business men, and their houses were agreeable places of social resort. The wealth and refinement of the period was not entirely confined to these neighborhoods. There were pretty cottages nestling among the chaparral and behind the sand hills in divers localities. Judge Barrett built the picturesque house of many gables at the corner of Sutter and Stockton streets, which had for successive owners, Lucian Herman, Dr. Bowie and Mr. Clark of Clark's Point, its present proprietor. It is now known as the Tivoli Garden, and its sociability is convivial and bacchanalian rather than stylish and intellectual. Mr. Gillespie, who came to San Francisco from China in 1847, built a house on Mission street between Sixth and Seventh, opposite the Yerba Buena Cemetery, which was afterwards owned by J. Mora Moss, and still later by Pioche. No trace of it remains. Mr. Jacob Russ had a house at the corner of Harrison and Sixth streets. John Sullivan lived at the corner of Ellis and Stockton, and Henry Gherke at the corner of Eddy and Mason. Society showed an early tendency toward Rincon Hill and its environs. Among the first residences in that part of town was the old Folsom house on Second street, near Folsom, and the house of John Parrott on Folsom between Second and Third, which that gentleman still occupies. The dwellings of W. D. M. Howard and Samuel Brannan were on Mission street between Third and Fourth. The fashionable ladies of the Oriental Hotel used to visit them, crossing the hills near New Montgomery and Market to save time, and stopping in the friendly shelter of a manzanita bush, just before they reached their destination to pour out of their lasting gaiters the sand, which rendered walking unpleasant, and the poetry of motion impossible. The beaux of the period between 1851 and 1855, distinguished for personal grace and gallantry, were Ned Beale, George Pen Johnson, Captain W. H. Moor, Charles Webb Howard, George Morgan, Ben Smith, William Botts, Edward Pringle, Joseph Donahoe, Archie Peachy, John B. Felton and Sam. Ralston. Charley Strong was a wealthy bachelor, who had elegant rooms over Le Count's bookstore, where he entertained his friends. Society in San Francisco for the first four years after the admission of California as a State is described by early residents as animated and brilliant. The city was full of bright, intellectual, energetic people. Most of them were young, hopeful, and romantic. Their social intercourse had the polish of older communities, mingled with the dash and freedom of the frontier. Houses were well furnished, and balls, parties and receptions were stylish, without disagreeable formality. In 1854 and 1855, South Park and Rincon Hill became social centers. The change was partly the result of speculation. George P. Gordon, a wealthy Englishman, purchased of Squire P. Dewey several blocks of land, and created South Park. It was the original intention to lay it out in four sections, but only two were completed. The part finished was built up with substantial houses, and for a while there was little that was stylish or correct in the city except in its vicinity. Its principal residents were Captain A. A. Ritchie, George C. Johnson, Consul General of Sweden and Norway; Horace P. James, Judge Wallace, Lloyd Tevis, I. B. Haggin, James Otis, John F. Osgood, Martin Klinkofstrom, Russian Consul; George P. Gordon, Charles De Ro, Thomas J. Poulterer, John H. Reddington, William M. Gwin, Commodore J. T. Watkins and Captain Richard Whiting. On Bryant street, near by, lived Louis McLean and B. F. Washington, Collectors of the port of San Francisco. Rincon Hill was covered with residences a little later. Among the first, and still among the most conspicuous, was the house of General Halleck, at the corner of Second and Folsom streets, occupied at present by Colonel Granniss. William F. Babcock built, at a very early day, the dwelling which he still occupies, at the corner of Stanley Place and Essex. The boundaries of South Park and Rincon Hill were never well defined, the neighborhood including Second, Bryant, Harrison, and some adjacent streets and places. Within these limits lived Bishop Kip, P. Sather, Frank Randall, J. W. Tucker, John O. Earl, Benjamin Horne, Thomas H. Selby, H.

W. Carleton, A. B. Forbes, and many other people of wealth and quality. This was nearly twenty-five years ago. Young ladies were not as plentiful then as now, but the few who were in society were more observable. The best known, from the year 1852 to 1857, were a trio sometimes called "the Three Graces," but more commonly known as "the World, the Flesh, and the Devil,"—Miss Rosa Gore, Miss Lottie Hall, and Miss Patsey Ritchie. There was no merry-making at which they were not present, and no mischief brewed to which they did not add some ingredients. During this second epoch of the social history of San Francisco, there lived several ladies of superior accomplishments, who would have adorned the society of any city in the world. One of these was Mrs. M. S. Latham, formerly Miss Sophie Birdsall, a woman of magnificent mind and vigorous character. Mrs. Dr. Hitchcock had a ready wit and superior attainments. Mrs. Sam. Ward, daughter of John Grimes, a celebrated lawyer of Louisiana, was esteemed one of the most cultivated and beautiful women of the day. She had spent some time abroad, had been presented at foreign courts, and was a musician, an artist, and a linguist. Mrs. Greenough was less accomplished, though bright and witty in society, and her daughter Miss Florence Greenough was known throughout the United States as a fascinating beauty. Mrs. Gwin and Mrs. Edwin Herrick were women of social worth, and Mrs. A. A. Ritchie was graceful, handsome, cultivated and skilled in conversation. Manners were becoming more formal, though they still had a freedom not usual in eastern cities. The belles of the first decade married in the due course of events, and disappeared partially from public view. The daughter of Mrs. Lucian Herman married William Burling; Rev. Dr. Scott's daughter married Nicholas G. Kittle; Mrs.

Gwin's daughter married Mr. Evan Coleman, and her charming niece, Miss Ella Gwin, was led to the altar by John C. Maynard. Miss Rosa Gore was first married to Mr. Bonner, President of the Savage mine, and after his death to Mr. Franz Locan. Dr. Gordon became the husband of Nellie Gordon, and Thomas Morrison, of the Bank of California, won the hand of Maggie, the daughter of John H. Middleton. Many years afterwards Miss Lillie Hitchcock was married to Howard Coit of the San Francisco Stock Exchange. Miss Lida Ritchie married R. C. Rogers; Miss Patsey Ritchie, General M. L. Simpson; Miss Nellie Ritchie, Major Elliott of the Engineer corps, and Miss Hettie Ritchie, Captain Caziare, also of the regular army. In 1860, or a few years previous, society began another hegira, this time to the southern slope of Russian Hill, extending south along Taylor and the intersecting streets toward the locality now known as Nob Hill. Among the first houses built were those of William F. Walton at the corner of Taylor and Washington, now occupied by William T. Coleman, and that of Captain Thomas at the corner of Taylor and Sacramento, now inhabited by A. E. Head. These, with the brick house on the corner of Washington and Taylor, opposite Mr. Coleman's, where E. W. Gross lived, were erected shortly before the rebellion. In 1860 Lloyd Tevis built on the corner of Taylor and Jackson streets. The period was one of transition. Society, cramped for room, was fluttering about over the city seeking places to alight. The hills were steep, and in a measure, inaccessible, and those who objected to climbing selected building sites in the streets further south. Bush was at first preferred. C. Adolphe Low selected a site on Bush at the corner of Leavenworth, and D. J. Tallant on the same street at the corner of Jones. The residences of both were considered handsome ten years ago. Fashion afterwards condescended to settle on Pine, Sutter, Post and Geary streets, and since that time has been uncertain regarding the choice of locations. Society has become too cumbrous for general management. Within the last half dozen years it has been segregating into cliques and neighborhoods. Every part of the city has a tinge of gentility. The most genteel neighborhoods are Rincon Hill, where fragments of polite society still linger; Bush, Sutter and the adjacent streets; Van Ness Avenue, which within five years has become a magnificent thoroughfare; California street beyond Van Ness, which is being rapidly built up and beautified; Pacific Avenue and the locality near the Presidio; and Nob Hill, which includes Taylor as far north as Pacific street, the last locality promising to eclipse all other localities in extravagant display of riches. The rage for splendid houses began with the costly country-seats at Menlo and the building of the Haggin house at the corner of Taylor and Washington streets seven or eight years ago. Since then it has seemed to be the aim to make each new private residence finer, more artistic, costlier than its predecessor. The house on Sutter street, enlarged by Senator Sharon, and furnished with every luxury that it seemed taste could desire or wealth purchase, with carpets of the most expensive make, chandeliers costing two thousand dollars each, and the richest furniture that could be found in Paris, was deemed, and was in reality, a palace. It has been far excelled since by the residences of Leland Stanford and Charles Crocker, which are in turn surpassed by the castellated mansion of Mrs. Mark Hopkins. It is not probable that the houses to be built by James C. Flood and James G. Fair on Nob Hill will be inferior to the best of these either in splendor of external appearance, or in richness and beauty of internal decoration. At present the families of our wealthiest citizens are more luxuriously housed than most European princes. To this excessive expenditure there will come an end, not perhaps until the next generation begins to scatter the means which this has accumulated. Our millionaires show no disposition as yet to economize, though for the last year or two many people of moderate means have evinced that desire by discontinuing the tribal relations of the hotel, and resuming the more private family ties of the domestic hearthstone. Society in San Francisco has in it the possibilities of the greatest refinement and the best culture. It is at present liable to the reproach of the nouveaux riches, as are most communities that have had similar experiences. The lines that divide its different classes are not yet distinctly drawn. The different sections overlap at the edges. If we speak of it as composed of superimposed strata, we may say that the composition of the lower changes insensibly into the next higher, and so on to the aristocratic capstone. It is not always easy to see where the adventurer merges into the gambler, the gambler into the stock-sharp, the stock-sharp into the regular broker, the broker into the man who follows occupations of greater certainty, until we reach the summit of wealthy leisure and unexceptional gentility. In reply to this it may be urged that it is changing rapidly. The lines are year by year more tightly drawn. Moral distinctions are oftener observed. Good taste is more generally displayed in private residences, in dress, in equipage, and superior decorum is seen in social gatherings. It has been remarked by Eastern visitors that in no hotel in the country, excepting perhaps those of the fashionable watering places, can there be daily seen so well dressed and self-possessed an assemblage of people as gathers every evening in the dining-room of the Palace. The generation of young people coming on the scene has had the advantages of good schools, and the experience of foreign travel. These results are being accomplished without much social activity. During the financial depression of the last few years there have been few brilliant balls or parties. A stylish wedding has occasionally varied the monotony. Dinner-giving has almost become a lost art. The community wants intelligent leadership. It needs ladies and gentlemen at the hotels who can organize little assemblies that will render that mode of existence tolerable. Grand parties with their crush and discomfort can in a measure be dispensed with, if we have more meetings around the dinner-table, and more inexpensive gatherings in neighborhoods for pleasure or for intellectual improvement. The influence of private theatricals and of amateur concerts would be refining, and they might often be made to inure to the benefit of some worthy charity. Fashion should never aim to exist for itself alone, and it always has at hand the means of uniting polite social intercourse with mutual improvement and the amelioration of the ills that afflict humanity. That which has been achieved in San Francisco society may be considered as merely indicative of what may be accomplished hereafter by the vast wealth and the many moral, social and intellectual advantages enjoyed by our citizens.

RECEPTION DAYS.

RECEPTION days are a part of the economy of familiar intercourse—a means by which a community effects the division of its social labor. The newness of our conditions has not prevented the society of San Francisco from becoming in some respects more formal than that of any other American city. Ladies of fashion elsewhere who have their stated days for receiving visitors are glad to see their friends at any time. Here ladies, as a rule, are invisible to their most intimate associates except on the one day of the week set apart for calling. This is neither essential, nor is it in good form. Exception may be made in favor of those mothers of families whose domestic duties demand a division of time with society; but the ladies of aristocratic localities who reckon the value of their diamonds by the hundred thousand, and their wealth by the million, whose constant attire is purple and fine linen, have no reasons for such seclusion. There is no good cause why they should not be always “at home” to a select circle. There is a needless precision about our local reception days in other respects than this. Eating and drinking have from the earliest times and in all civilized communities been closely allied to social observance. By this is not, of course, meant simple feeding, or gross conviviality. No one desires to have the scenes in the drawing-room of an old English squire reproduced in a modern parlor. But some simple refreshment, even if it is nothing more than a glass of wine or a cup of coffee, with a biscuit or a piece of cake, helps to ease of manner and comfortable feeling. If our ladies, on their days of reception, had as auxiliaries one or two of their intimate friends, married or single, their burdens would be lessened and ease and sociability increased. The custom of stated days being established, it is only to be considered how they can be rendered most conducive to friendly intercourse. An effort has been made to give to each locality a special reception day. This pleases a majority of ladies, though some object that if the rule prevails they are unable to visit their neighbors or to receive calls from them. The hotels seem by common consent to have selected Mondays, a day on which there is not much visiting elsewhere. Different neighborhoods have settled informally on special days, which may be specified nearly as follows: On Nob Hill, which includes a portion of Taylor and adjacent streets, Tuesday is found to be most convenient. Wednesday is the reception day of South Park and Rincon Hill. The ladies on Bush and adjacent streets receive on Thursdays, the ladies of Van Ness Avenue and neighborhoods adjoining on Thursdays, and those living on Pacific Avenue, at the Presidio, and on other streets in that part of the city, on Fridays. These days are not absolutely adhered to, but are yet so faithfully observed as to form a rule, which will ere long become universal. Ladies receive everywhere in ordinary dinner-dress, anent which it may be said that the matrons and maids of San Francisco are attired in a style and with an elegance not excelled by their fashionable sisters in any metropolis of the country. Gentlemen on reception days or evenings are only dressed en regle in black frock coats and light-colored pantaloons, a rule not so carefully observed here as it should be. New Year's receptions will always be in vogue. At these, ladies receive alone or with one or two friends. To "receive" on an occasion of such festivity without offering refreshments is hardly allowable. The entertainment offered may be either entirely temperate or mildly bibulous. The eatables may comprise oysters, salads, cold meats and cakes. The preferable wines are sherry, sauterne, and champagne, the last being held by some ladies to be objectionable from reasons that are evident. In conclusion it may be remarked that the San Francisco reception day, as known and recognized by our ladies, is purely a local institution. It is made to do duty for social gatherings of various kinds. It obviates in a measure the necessity of breakfasts, lunches and dinners. It diminishes the number of evening parties. The common books of etiquette do not provide rules for it, therefore it becomes our leaders of fashion to see that its laws are duly established and maintained as far as possible in accordance with the general code that governs the manners of polite society in all parts of the world.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

As the following Calling and Address Lists were necessarily closed to additions and corrections on the first of January, and as society is so constantly on the move, the residence and number reference will not always be found correct. The lists have been so arranged, however, that corrections can readily be made with pen or pencil on the same page and directly after the name. This will enable the possessor to keep up with the movements of friends and acquaintances throughout the year.

The Elite Directory for 1880 will be published on the first of December, 1879, when all possible improvements will be made.

BAR ASSOCIATION.

THE Bar Association of San Francisco was formed in the spring of 1872, as the constitution states, "to maintain the honor and dignity of the profession of law, to increase the usefulness in promoting the administration of justice, and to cultivate social intercourse among its members." It has maintained its principles, and its good work has been obvious in the general improvement of legal manners and the greater urbanity of attorneys when brought into business contact. It was organized with twenty members, who selected from the Bar at large such persons as they deemed desirable associates. The number of members has increased to 125, of whom about 50 reside in the interior towns. Current expenses are defrayed by monthly dues paid by city members, who have the daily use of the rooms. The country members pay only an entrance fee. The Judges of all the courts have the privileges of regular members. The rooms are located on Commercial street, and pleasantly appointed, with reading-room, dining-room, sleeping apartments, and the necessary offices. One of the most conspicuous objects in them is a frame containing the original signatures of the members of the Convention which formed the first Constitution of California. Not much is attempted in a social way by the Association, but informal receptions and elegant lunches are sometimes tendered distinguished visitors. Among the celebrated guests who have been so entertained were Jere Black and David Dudley Field. The officers of the Association since its formation have been : J. P. Hoge, President; Hall McAllister and S. M. Wilson, Vice-Presidents; Thomas B. Bishop, Recording Secretary; J. R. Jarboe, Corresponding Secretary; R. C. Harrison, Treasurer.

ART ASSOCIATION.

THE preliminary meeting, out of which grew the Art Association, was held on the twenty-first of March, 1871. On the twenty-eighth of the same month an organization was effected, with J. B. Wandesforde as President, Frederick Whympers as Secretary, and a membership of eighteen. In May, 1871, the first reception was given at Mercantile Library Hall, with a handsome display of pictures on easels. The Association had at first no rooms specially devoted to its use, but held its meetings in the Museum of the Mercantile Library. The succeeding receptions were given at Pacific Hall. In June, 1872, the commodious rooms on Pine street, near Sansome, were fitted up, and the first public reception given in them, there being a display of 287 paintings by local, eastern, and foreign artists. For several years thereafter, the receptions were quarterly. In February, 1877, the Association moved to its present quarters at 430 Pine street, in the building occupied by the Bohemian Club. The rooms include two well lighted art galleries, a room for the art school well furnished with appliances for teaching, a library, and Secretary's office. The presidents since Mr. Wandesforde have been William Alvord, J. C. Duncan and Irving M. Scott. The present secretary is Jennings S. Cox, who is assisted by J. R. Martin. The Art School began its sessions in 1873. It has been from the first in charge of Virgil Williams, who has been assisted by R. D. Yelland since the fifteenth of May, 1877. It has yearly grown more prosperous, the present class being the largest it has ever had. The annual exhibitions of the school have indicated talent and industry on the part of the pupils, and skilled and conscientious instruction on the part of the teachers. The school has three sessions yearly. The Board of Directors of the Association meet for business purposes on the last Tuesday of each month. The executive stands at present : Irving M. Scott, President; William Bradford, First Vice-President; William Babcock, Second Vice-President; Jennings S. Cox, Secretary; Henry Barroilhet, Treasurer; Directors, Fred. H. Rogers, William Norris, P. B. Cornwall, J. W. Rix, M. Straus, S. M. Smith.

LORING CLUB.

THE "Loring Club" was informally established by several gentlemen, Mr. Prescott Loring among them, with the design of promoting musical culture in San Francisco. After practicing together for a brief time, the rapid increase of membership rendered permanent organization necessary. A name was given and by-laws adopted in November, 1876. The first meeting of the club under its present name was held on the fourth of December, 1876, and on the eleventh of the same month thirty-eight of the gentlemen who had been singing together had signed the by-laws and constituted the original members. The club gives concerts and rehearsals under the direction of Mr. Loring, a select programme being rendered by a male chorus and solo singers, usually assisted by some soprano vocalist of eminence, or some instrumentalists of reputation. The concerts differ from the rehearsals in being more classical, and in aiming at social elegance. Full dress is required of active members, and requested of associate members and invited guests. The club has exerted a refined social influence, and its progress in musical culture has been decided. Meetings for rehearsal are held every Monday evening. The executive consists of F. F. Low, President; Oliver Eldridge, Vice-President; A. McF. Davis, Treasurer; C. P. Low, Secretary, and Prescott Loring, Librarian. The customary weekly meetings are held at the Chickering piano rooms, on Post street.

THE BERKELEY CLUB.

THE Berkeley Club is composed of professors of the State University, and a few literary gentlemen of Oakland and San Francisco. It originated in 1873, with a little knot of thirteen persons, gathered at the invitation of D. C. Gilman, then President of the University. Its membership has never exceeded thirty. Its bi-monthly meetings for the first six months were held at the houses of members. Since that time they have been held in Dr. Hamilton's study, at the Independent Church in Oakland. Members take their turn in presiding. The Secretary is the only stated officer. Subjects for discussion are selected a month in advance. Every Thursday afternoon the members gather, and partake of a dinner almost lenten in its simplicity. Then a lecture is delivered or an essay read on the prescribed topic, after which there is a general debate on the theme and its manner of treatment by the speaker. The views expressed vary from strict orthodoxy to the most ultra opinions of the Spencerian school of philosophy. The debates are invariably temperate, though always earnest, and sometimes personal. Mr. Gilman is still a deeply interested member, though actively engaged in his duties as President of the John Hopkins University at Baltimore. The Secretary is J. H. Smyth.

THE CHIT-CHAT CLUB.

THIS Club was organized November 9th, 1874, with six members, five of whom still retain their membership. The Secretary is the only elective officer, the Essayist of one meeting being the President of the next meeting. The Club meets at dinner on the second Monday of each month. After dinner the evening is devoted to the discussion of questions in Political Economy and Literature, alternately; a subject in Literature being chosen for one meeting, and a subject in Political Economy for the next. At the annual meetings held in November of each year, a number of distinguished guests have been entertained. The proceedings at the annual dinners are printed and preserved in pamphlet form. The list of Essays, in the order in which they were read, illustrates the range of questions discussed, and the general character of the Club.

CLUBS AND CLUB LIFE.

THE social organization known as a club had its origin way back in the days of Elizabeth, when the Mermaid tavern in Fleet street, London, enlivened by Shakespeare, Raleigh, Ben Johnson, Beaumont and Fletcher, became the rendezvous of a sort of club. These meetings were informal social affairs, to which all were welcome who could bring humor or wit. Johnson afterwards founded a club at the Devil's tavern, Fleet street, which became famous. This was the origin, pure and simple, of clubs which, according to Johnson's definition, is "an assembly of good fellows meeting under certain conditions," these conditions being suited to the character of the organization. In the early part of the eighteenth century clubs became very numerous and popular. The Brothers Club, of which Bolinbroke, Hawley and Swift were members; the Hanoverian Club; the Beefsteak Club presided over by Peg Woffington, the actress, and the Kit Cat Club flourished in this era. The King's Head Club was a famous political association during the reign of Charles II. The second Beefsteak Club was established in 1735, and embraced among its members some of the most famous men of the day. The Literary Club, established in 1764, by Johnston, Boswell, Reynolds, Goldsmith, Burke and others, is still flourishing. From England the political club spread to France and other countries. They became such a source of power and disquiet in Germany that in 1793 they were prohibited. In France they became the focus of the Revolution, the first society taking the name of club being the Club Politique, established at Paris in 1782.

Clubs for social, political, literary and artistic purposes, are now found in every large city in the civilized world. London numbers now over sixty-eight first class clubs, owning some of the most elegant buildings in the city. Paris is full of these organizations; New York, Boston, and the large cities east are well supplied; but in proportion to its population San Francisco leads the world in the segregation of its male population. The club is a condition almost of comfortable existence here, and has been so from the earliest days. Then the gambling saloon, with its warmth and glitter and excitement, and non-responsibility, was the common rendezvous, and the place where everybody was, of an evening especially, to be found. Wines and liquors flowed freely, masquerade and fancy dress balls were given at the expense of the larger establishments, orchestras discoursed the best of music, and most enticing of all was the rattle of chips and shifting of luck over the green cloth—the fascination of gambling which all Californians love so well. Even to this present day there is much of the old-time gregariousness. Business is huddled into a few streets. Men meet constantly within the area of a few blocks, lunch at counters, and rendezvous at the club and the theatre in the evening. Instead of being a great city, San Francisco is, in this respect, a great country town—a city of bachelors. Everybody knows everybody else. There is no severe dignity, no particular distinctions, no great amount of deference accorded the old by the young. The day is a whirlpool of business; the night a season of recreation and dissipation. There is no social circle to attract, no domestic ties, no home to the great majority of young men but the lodging-house and the hotel, none of the influences that obtain where the climate makes the fireside a necessity, and where society demands that certain conditions of behavior shall be complied with in order to be classed with respectability. And strange to say, out of this changeable and reckless material has been evolved some of the best club organizations that have ever existed—clubs noted the country through for their prodigal, yet genuine hospitality, harmonious management, and the shrewd, intelligent, quick-witted, open-hearted and genial specimens of American manhood composing their membership. Most of the fashionable clubs are located within a few blocks of each other, and all spread a lunch, which is the favorite rendezvous, and a meal that no Californian ever thinks of taking at home. The Pacific is the oldest Club in the city, having been organized in 1852. It is also the most exclusive and dignified, its membership being confined mostly to the upper crust millionaires and merchants. The Union Club, incorporated in 1865, was first started as a private speculation, suited to the requirements of the eminently respectable old codgers of the day who, loth to linger in the whirl and excitement of the famous old Bank Exchange—the public club at that time—found here a refuge and a rest. Now it is a great institution, conducted on the comprehensive English plan—feeding, sleeping and entertaining its members—a luxurious and exclusive home, virtually a private hotel. The San Francisco Verein—the swell German club—is conducted on much the same principles, and is said to have the most perfectly-appointed club rooms in the country. But the club par excellence—the nearest approximation in the world, perhaps, to the ideal of Johnson, and Shakespeare, and Raleigh, those old club pioneers—is the Bohemian Club. It is the literary and social club of the coast. Not literary in the Athenian sense, not social in that ultra way which has dragged so many promising organizations down to destruction; but literary and social in the true Bohemian sense of the word. The monthly “High Jinks” entertainments have been the marvel of visitors for their wit and wisdom and original method of management. No gambling is permitted. Its membership now comprises the most brilliant and progressive element of the community, more especially the young and middle-aged. Its rooms are convenient and commodious, and its dues merely nominal. The other clubs, such as the Concordia, the Olympic, and a hundred others that might be mentioned, all have special features that will be found mentioned in each club preface. There are no purely political social clubs in the city. As to the general tone and influence of the San Francisco Clubs, they are not so demoralizing to society as might at first be imagined. Without a doubt they are all enemies to the social circle. Any organization that furnishes good food, luxurious surroundings, and an opportunity to meet intelligence, and wealth, and wit, on an equal footing, naturally would be. It undoubtedly works disaster to the marriage relation, and is the especial abomination of ambitious mothers having daughters to marry. And yet there is not the degree of dissipation that has been talked and written regarding them. Only one club of prominence ever swung entirely into the broad and destructive way—the California, an organization of budding young brokers—and that had such a speedy and embarrassing death that the experiment will not soon again be tried. Money is recklessly squandered it is true, and very little thought taken for the future or the morrow. It could not well be otherwise, with fortunes made and lost in a day—with liberality the rule, and even an approach to economy the exception. But this prodigality brings luxury, and comfort, and associations that are considered an ample compensation for the outlay; and the charm of the club and its freedom of life will linger here as long as we remain the same nervous, variable and peculiarly audacious people.

THE PACIFIC CLUB.

THE constitution of the Pacific Club was adopted on the thirteenth of May, 1852. The first president was Beverly C. Sanders-elect a week later. The first rooms used for club purposes were in a building on the southeast corner of Kearny and Commercial streets. Since then the Club has been nomadic, using in succession rooms at the corner of Washington and Stockton streets, at the corner of Washington and Montgomery streets, on Sacramento street below Kearny, on Commercial street below Kearny, on California street below Kearny, and the present convenient quarters at the corner of Bush and Montgomery streets, which have been occupied about one year. These are ample in size, have all the appliances essential to club life, and are furnished with a view rather to comfort than elegance. The membership includes numerous old residents of the city, and many professional gentlemen of high standing. It is reckoned the most exclusive of the local clubs. The Presidents have been: Beverly C. Sanders, John A. Monroe, J. Mora Moss, B. C. Sanders (vice Moss, resigned), M. H. McAllister, L. Maynard (vice McAllister, resigned), W. C. Walker (vice Maynard, resigned), A. J. Bowie, Bailie Peyton, L. Maynard, D. W. Connelly, Ogden Hoffman, C. E. McLane, William Norris. The governing board now stands as follows: President, W. Alvord; Vice President, Oliver Eldridge; Treasurer, J. M. Kee; Secretary, J. C. L. Wadsworth; Executive Committee, Claus Spreckles, R. E. Brewster, W. Sillem, A. J. Ellis, Frank McCoppin, B. H. Coit.

THE UNION CLUB.

THE Union Club began in 1854 as a private association, under the management of Colonel Canty. The first rooms occupied were on Washington street near Stockton. The club remained here a few weeks and then removed to the building at the corner of California and Montgomery streets, which it has since occupied, occasional changes and enlargements having been made to accommodate its increased proportions. It was managed by private persons until 1865, when it was incorporated under the laws of the State. Its objects are social intercourse and personal accommodation. In the spring of 1876 the rooms were refitted and new doors added, at an expenditure of $25,000. Members now find all the comforts of a home. There are parlors, reading-room, billiard-room, card-rooms, dining-room, and an admirable cuisine, which furnishes three meals a day. The upper floor is used for sleeping apartments, many of which are permanently occupied. The Presidents, since incorporation, have been Selim E. Woodworth, William M. Greenwood, H. F. Teschemacher, William Lane Booker, William H. Foster, R. C. Rogers, and A. McKinlay. H. P. Blanchard is the present Vice-President, J. M. Quay, Secretary and Treasurer, and Henry Cottrell, Assistant Secretary.

THE BOHEMIAN CLUB.

THIS organization, so widely and favorably known, was originally intended—as was the Lotus Club of New York—to be an association of the professional journalists of San Francisco. The first meeting of consequence was held on the twenty-third of February, 1872, in the editorial rooms of the Evening Examiner, Benjamin P. Avery, late minister to China and then an editorial writer on the Bulletin, presiding. After some considerable discussion the first draft of the constitution and by-laws was adopted, which specified that “This association shall be called The Bohemian Club, and its objects shall be the promotion of good fellowship among journalists and other writers, and the elevation of the profession of journalism to that place in the popular estimation to which it is entitled; professional journalists to be eligible to active membership—actors, essayists, poets, and dramatic authors to be entitled to honorary membership.” On this basis the club went into active existence, the list of members comprising the names of nearly all the reputable journalists of the city, with a strong artistic, musical and dramatic following. In a very short time, however, there came trouble and a proposition to change the name of the club from “Bohemian” to something more aristocratic, and to let into active membership those outside of the strict line drawn by the constitution in favor of journalists. The controversy resulted in the old name being retained, but the barrier of exclusiveness was broken down by a revision of the aims and purpose clause of the constitution to read: “This club is founded for the association of gentlemen connected professionally with literature, art, music, the drama, and all those who, by reason of their love or appreciation of these objects, may be deemed eligible." On the twenty-fifth of March, 1872, the first rooms of the club in the Astor House, corner of Webb and Sacramento, were occupied, and the following officers elected: President, Thomas Newcomb; Vice-President, Henry Edwards; Secretary, Sands W. Forman; Treasurer, Arpad Haraszthy; Directors, D. P. Belknap, Samuel M. Brookes, Edward Bosqui, A. G. Hawes, J. C. Williamson. From this time forward the club grew steadily in membership, and the old rooms proving too small, the present elegant apartments, 430 Pine street, over the California Market, were secured and occupied on the twenty-fifth of January, 1877. Since the removal, over one hundred and fifty new members have been admitted, and the list now contains the names of nearly five hundred of the brightest and wittiest minds in the metropolis connected with letters, music and art, either professionally or by taste. One of the features of the club—and one that is not only famous at home but abroad—is the monthly entertainment known as a "High Jinks" [High Noon with the Muses]. On these occasions a "sire" or presiding officer of the evening is chosen, who selects a subject in music, literature, art, or science, and this is discussed pro and con by papers and speeches, supplemented by music, and repartee, and fragrant punches. The formal session or "High Jinks" is followed by what is known as "Low Jinks," a performance as peculiar to the club as its description is impossible. It is sui generis, and its remembrances are a pleasant page in the memory of every stranger and specially invited guest. Twice a year a Ladies' Jinks or reception is given, but a degree of formality is observed that is anything but characteristic of the regular sessions. Ladies are also permitted to visit the club rooms on Wednesday afternoons of each week, that being the reception and exhibition day of new pictures or other works of art. The initiation fee is fifty dollars, and the dues three dollars per month. An elegant lunch is spread every day, and the tables crowded with a jolly, witty, and well-dispositioned set, who make this the noonday rendezvous, to discuss and comment on topics of passing interest. The coat of arms of the club is an owl perched on an empty skull, with the words "Weaving spiders come not here" on a background shield, divided into four sections, representing literature, art, music, and the drama. The present officers are, R. C. Rogers, President; John H. Boalt, Vice-President; A. S. Bender, Secretary; A. J. Moulder, Treasurer; S. M. Smith, R. J. Wilson, A. D. Bradley, J. W. Rix, W. G. Holmes, Directors.

OCCIDENTAL CLUB.

OAKLAND.

THE Occidental Club is of recent origin, its first meeting having been held on the thirty-first of January, 1878. It was incorporated with eighty-two charter members. Its object was "to provide and maintain suitable accommodations and appliances for the recreation of, and to promote social intercourse, among its members." Rooms were obtained and fitted up in elegant style at the corner of Twelfth and Harrison streets, into which the club moved in the following February, and which have since been occupied. The first officers were: President, George H. Wheaton; Vice-President, George S. Dodge; Secretary, H. Bendel; Treasurer, I. Lohman. The only executive change since made has been in the position of Secretary, Mr. H. Bendel having been replaced by Mr. H. A. Leake. The rooms are commodious and well suited to the objects sought. The membership comprises the best citizens of Oakland.

SAN FRANCISCO VEREIN.

THE San Francisco Verein was organized by prominent German citizens in October, 1853, in Schuppert's Hall, at the corner of Jackson and Stockton streets. The first rooms occupied as club-rooms were at the corner of Merchant and Montgomery streets. The increase of membership was rapid, and in 1854 rooms were fitted up, under the direction of the society, on Kearny street, near Montgomery. Here they remained until 1869, when they moved to the rooms over the California Market, now occupied by the Bohemian Club. In 1874 they changed to their rooms at the corner of Sutter and Dupont, which had been fitted up at a cost of sixty-five thousand dollars. These are deemed unsurpassed in comfort, convenience and elegance by any in the United States used for similar purposes. The whole of the second floor above Central Market is made available, comprising a superficial area of one hundred and ninety-five and one half feet front by one hundred and thirty-seven and one half feet deep. The visitor entering from Sutter street finds the ladies' dressing-room and toilet-room at his right, and next them, in order, on the Sutter street side, the parlors, library, and reading-room. On the Dupont street front are five card-rooms connected by folding doors. On the inner side of the corridor, which follows the direction of both streets, are a bed-room, dining-room, kitchen, refreshment-room, and dancing-hall, containing a stage with all necessary appurtenances for musical and dramatic performances. Besides these, there are all the servants' rooms and store-room needed. Three meals a day are furnished, but no apartments are provided for regular lodgers. Balls, parties, concerts, and dramatic performances, given at regular intervals, constitute the means of entertainment. The officers are: Dr. J. N. Eckel, President; H. E. Truebenbach, H. Rothchild, Vice-Presidents; B. Hausmann, Recording Secretary; E. Wolf, Financial Secretary; Martin Philip, Treasurer.

THE CONCORDIA.

THE Concordia, the principal Jewish society of San Francisco, was established in 1864. The first President was Israel Steinhart. The first rooms occupied were on the south-east corner of Bush and Kearny. In 1868, a change was made to rooms on Sutter street, between Kearny and Dupont. In 1873, the society took possession of the present commodious rooms in the army building at the corner of Stockton and O'Farrell, fitted up at a cost of $30,000. The membership is entirely Jewish, and chiefly composed of wholesale merchants. The rooms have the usual appliances for comfort and pleasant entertainment. There is a reading-room, furnished with magazines and newspapers; a library, with books of reference; a billiard-room, dining-hall, etc. The rooms are only open evenings and Sundays. The entertainments are monthly or bi-monthly parties, at which are seen the élite of the Hebrew residents of the city. The officers are: M. Heller, President; E. Emanuel, Vice-President; J. H. Ackerman, Recording Secretary; P. Barth, Financial Secretary; M. Heynemann, Treasurer.

CASINO HISPANO-AMERICANO.

THE Spanish-American Club was organized in November, 1876, and installed, on the sixth of the December following, in the rooms which it has since occupied at 212 Sutter street. The object of the association is sociability, and the keeping alive of the early memories of California through the intercourse of the Spanish and Spanish-American residents of the city, and of others who speak the Spanish language. The Board of Directors meets on the first Monday of each month. Preparations are making for the second social gathering since organization. The membership is exceedingly select. The present official board comprises: President, Eugene de Sabla; Vice-President, Joaquin Bolado; Treasurer, Nicholas Gasciola; Secretary, J. H. Sielcken; Directors, R. Cohen, J. M. Montealegre, J. Carrascosa, A. Calderon, F. Urruela.

THE OLYMPIC CLUB.

THE Olympic is one of the best gymnastic clubs in the country. Its beginning in 1860 was unpretentious. There were twenty-three charter members, who at their first meeting elected T. W. Bell, President; E. Bonnell, Secretary; and H. G. Hanks, Treasurer. Exercising was commenced, under the leadership of H. W. A. Nahl, in a small hall that stood on the site of the Grand Hotel. The history of the organization has been one of uninterrupted prosperity. It has moved three times, and each time into better quarters. Its present rooms are on Post, between Kearny and Dupont Streets. They comprise a main hall, or gymnasium, which is used for concerts and dancing; spacious parlors, reading, chess, billiard, bath and dressing rooms. Members are only elected after rigid examination. Full-dress balls, and monthly informal parties, are the chief social features. An annual exhibition is given at one of the theatres. The officers are: Horace B. Fletcher, President; J. K. Wilson, Vice-president; E. S. Emmons, Secretary; E. W. Newhall, Treasurer; Dwight Germain, Leader. Directors: F. W. Curtis, A. H. Barney, Wilson Davidson, Dr. Thos. Boyson, M. Fuller, Henry B. Havens. Superintendent: W. S. Lawton.

THE THEATRES.

FOR the convenience of the amusement going public we herewith present official box-office plans of the principal theatres, with descriptions and fixed prices of admission. As it is impossible in so small a space to give number of each seat in full, the figures have been arranged running from extremes in rows of the different sections. To locate seats first consult ticket coupon for dress circle, orchestra or parquette, then find row—if even numbers, to right of house looking toward stage—if odd, to the left—then seat by counting in couplets, 2, 4, 6, 8, etc., 1, 3, 5, 7, etc., from lowest to highest figures in the row. Consult diagram before going to the theater, and having located seats go direct to the usher of that particular section. This will prevent confusion and disagreeable waits. As these plans are official, seats can be secured from box-office by American District Telegraph or special messengers. To reserve desirable seats and boxes, the matter should be attended to as soon as announcement of the opening of the box-office sheet is made. It is just as cheap to get the best seats as to be obliged to put up with the poorest. Bear this in mind.

THE CALIFORNIA THEATRE.

THE California Theatre is on the north side of Bush street, between Kearny and Dupont. It is well arranged in regard to exits and entrances, and the auditorium is in all respects convenient and comfortable. Its stage is ample, equipped with all necessary scenic devices, and equally well adapted to the production of spectacles, Shaksperian plays, comedy, or the society drama. The parquette and dress-circle have chairs of the usual design, seating seven hundred persons, with stools for one hundred more in the lobby. There are four proscenium boxes, accommodating four to six persons each, and three mezzanine boxes on either side of the dress-circle, holding from three to six. The lessees are Messrs. W. B. Barton and Frank Lawlor. Barton Hill is acting manager, Thomas Maguire, Jr., treasurer, and William Voegtlin, scenic artist.

BALDWIN'S THEATRE.

BALDWIN'S Theatre is on the north side of Market street, between Fourth and Fifth. It is one of the most elegant theatres in the country in style and finish. Its special line of business is society plays, comedy, and melo-drama, though its stage can be adapted to more general dramatic uses. The seats are easy and accessible. There are twelve proscenium boxes, seating six persons each; and ten mezzanine boxes, seating four persons each. There are one hundred and seventy-six chairs in the orchestra, and three hundred and ten in the dress-circle. The balcony or family-circle seats four hundred and thirty-eight persons. The theatre is managed by Thomas Maguire, assisted by Frederick Lyster as acting manager, and G. R. Chipman as treasurer. George Dayton is scenic artist.

THE BUSH STREET THEATRE.

THE Bush Street Theatre, formerly called The Alhambra, is on the south side of Bush street between Kearny and Montgomery. The entrance is through a convenient vestibule, on the left of which are the box-office and manager's private office. The seats of the dress-circle are benches, neatly upholstered in blue. There are four proscenium boxes, each seating six persons. The parquette and dress-circle can easily accommodate seven hundred. This theatre furnishes light dramatic entertainment, including opera-bouffe and the more refined kinds of variety performance. The lessee and manager is Charles E. Locke. Martin Joyce is treasurer, and L. L. Graham, scenic artist.

THE STANDARD THEATRE.

THE Standard is on the north side of Bush street between Kearny and Montgomery. Its present lessee is M. H. Kennedy, who has had it handsomely refitted and refurnished. The box-office and manager's private office are on the left of the vestibule, which leads directly from the street to the dress-circle. The auditorium is furnished with mirrors, and the benches are neatly upholstered. The parquette and dress-circle seat 500 persons. There are four proscenium boxes, accommodating four persons each. M. H. Kennedy is lessee and manager; C. S. Walton, treasurer; Philip H. Kirby, business manager; and M. Straus, scenic artist.

THE GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

THE Grand Opera House is on the north side of Mission street, west of Third. It is the largest place of dramatic entertainment in the city. Its vestibule, lobbies and corridors are spacious, affording safe and convenient means of entrance and exit, and an elegant place for promenading during entr' actes. It has four tiers of seats, the two lower being the same in price, and equally eligible. There are twelve proscenium boxes, and twenty-two mezzanine boxes. The stage is large and completely appointed. The theatre is specially adapted to the spectacular drama, though it can be used for all legitimate scenic purposes. The auditorium is well lighted, well ventilated, and, in the fashionable tiers, furnished with broad chairs of the latest pattern. The property is owned by the Nevada Bank, and at present in charge of H. Rogers.

POINTS OF ETIQUETTE.

THERE are no rules of good breeding specially applicable to San Francisco society. Except in the matter of reception days, our social observance is much the same as in all large cities of the world. It could not well be otherwise, since the social code, though it is sometimes extreme in its formality, is founded everywhere on kind feeling and good sense. The conventionalities of society restrain and direct merely to remove friction, and assist life to freer and easier movement. Living in a republic, we lack some of the precise and cumbrous ceremonial which attends royal state in older and more aristocratic countries, and being on the frontier, etiquette relaxes a little for our convenience. This is the only difference, if it be a difference, between this and more ancient and sedate communities. The rules here given are compiled from many sources, and are intended to be at once concise and comprehensive. They are sufficient for all ordinary purposes of social intercourse, and will supply the ordinary need of a more elaborate work.

Introductions. Ladies of social equality are presented to each other, and so also are gentlemen. When the difference between the parties is doubtful, the person introducing may say: "Mrs. F. this is Mrs. X.; Mrs. X., Mrs. F.," thus striking a balance of respect.

A gentleman desiring to be introduced to a lady, must first obtain permission, after which the following formula may be used: "Mr. Arthur desires to be presented to Miss Angell." If the lady making the introduction desires the mutual acquaintance of the parties, she says: "This is Mr. Harmon, Mrs. Enfield. It gives me pleasure to present him to you." The married lady replies according to her feeling, and, of course, in terms of polite conversation. If she is pleased to know Mr. Harmon, she says so cordially and frankly, at the same time thanking the presentee, who withdraws at once.

A young lady in the same circumstances, politely recognizes the gentlemen, bows and smiles, using the name of the new acquaintance. The gentleman alone can express gratification, adding such compliments as the occasion seems to demand. The introduced parties may be as friendly as they please, but excessive cordiality on first acquaintance is not to be commended.

The etiquette of hand-shaking is simple. A man has no right to take a lady's hand till it is offered. He has even less right to pinch or retain it. Two ladies shake hands gently and softly. A young lady gives her hand, but does not shake a gentleman's, unless she is his friend. A lady should always rise to give her hand; a gentleman, of course, never dares to do so seated. On introduction in a room, a married lady generally offers her hand, a young lady not.

In a ball-room, where the introduction is to dancing, not to friendship, you never shake hands, and as a general rule, an introduction is not followed by shaking hands, only by a bow. It may perhaps be laid down that the more public the place of introduction, the less hand-shaking takes place; but if the introduction be particular, if it be accompanied by personal recommendation, such as, "I want you to know my friend Jones," or, if Jones comes with a letter of presentation, then you give Jones your hand, and warmly too. Lastly, it is the privilege of a superior to offer or withhold his or her hand, so that an inferior should never put his forward first.

If the difference in age between two ladies or two gentlemen be unmistakable, the younger is presented to the elder. If there is an admitted superiority, the disparity in age is unobserved. The unknown person is presented to the man of greater fame without question.

The single lady is introduced to the married lady, and the single gentleman to the married, other things being equal.

Persons born and reared in the best society never make a hasty presentation or introduction. An habitual though momentary reflection adjusts in their own minds the proper relation of the two who are about to be made known to each other, and unpleasant mistakes thus become almost impossible.

Introductions should be considered wholly unnecessary to a pleasant conversation. Every person should feel that he is, at least for the time, upon a social equality with every guest who is present. That a person was bidden to the entertainment proves that the host so considers him, and the acceptance of the invitation levels him, for the time, either up or down to the social grade of all whom he may meet, no matter at what estimate he may hold himself when elsewhere. A lady or gentleman must conduct himself or herself, while remaining in the house, as if there were no more exalted society than that which is present.

Salutations. "A bow," says La Fontaine, "is a note drawn at sight. You are bound to acknowledge it immediately, and to the full amount." According to circumstances, it should be respectful, cordial, civil, or familiar. An inclination of the head is often sufficient between gentlemen, or a gesture of the hand, or the mere touching of the hat; but in bowing to a lady the hat must be lifted. If you know people slightly, you recognize them slightly; if you know them well, you bow with more cordiality

The body is not bent at all in bowing, as in the days of the old school forms of politeness; the inclination of the head is all that is necessary.

One's own judgment ought to be sufficient as to the empressement of the salutation. In bowing to a lady, the hat is only lifted from the head, not held out at arm's length for a view of the interior. If smoking, the gentleman manages to withdraw his cigar before lifting his hat; or, should he happen to have his hand in his pocket, he removes it.

Gentlemen who are driving are obliged to keep a tight hold of the reins, and this is impossible if they remove their hats. A well-bred foreigner would never dream of saluting a lady by raising his whip to his hat. American gentlemen have adopted this custom, but it would be still better if they would set the fashion of bowing without touching the hat or raising the hand, when holding the reins.

A well-bred person bows the moment he recognizes an acquaintance. According to the rules of good society everywhere, every one who has been introduced to you is entitled to this mark of respect. A bow does not entail a calling acquaintance; to neglect it shows neglect of early education.

In thoroughfares where persons are constantly passing, gentlemen keep to the left of a lady, without regard to the wall, in order to protect her from the jostling elbows of the unmannerly; unless a lady prefers to walk on the gentleman's left, for his protection.

A gentleman walking with a lady returns a bow made to her (lifting his hat not too far from his head), although the one bowing is an entire stranger to him.

It is civility to return a bow, even if you do not know the one who is bowing to you.

Should any one wish to avoid a bowing acquaintance with a person who has once been properly introduced, he may do so by looking aside, or dropping the eyes as the person approaches, for if the eyes meet there is no alternative.

Bowing once on a public promenade is all that civility requires. At the second meeting, if you catch the eye of your acquaintance, smile slightly. If the gentleman is an acquaintance it is better to avert the eyes.

A lady may permit a gentleman who is walking with her to carry any very small parcel that she has, but never more than one.

A lady cannot take the arms of two gentlemen, nor should two ladies take each one arm of a gentleman, "sandwiching" him, as it were.

Gentlemen do not smoke when driving or walking with ladies, nor on promenades much frequented.

A married lady should always extend her hand to a stranger brought to her house by a common friend, as an evidence of her cordial welcome. Where an introduction is for dancing there is no shaking of hands.

A gentleman when stopped by a lady does not allow her to stand while talking with him, but offers to turn and walk with her.

When a gentleman joins a lady on the street, turning to walk with her, he is not obliged to escort her home. He can take his leave without making any apology.

Never give the cut direct unless for some inexcusable rudeness. It is better to meet a recognition coldly.

A lady may recognize a gentleman who has been formally presented to her, even when he cannot recall her face, on account of the difference of appearance made by the change from gaslight to daylight. His acknowledgment of her recognition must be as respectful as to a valued friend.

The same formalities obtain at entertainments. The gentleman, who is a formal acquaintance, waits patiently for the lady guest to recognize his presence.

When calling, gentlemen leave their umbrellas, overcoats, and overshoes in the hall; but take their hats and sticks with them into the drawing-room, unless they are calling on old friends. The hat and stick should never be deposited upon a chair or table, or any other article of furniture. They can be placed upon the floor, very near the chair occupied by the owner, if he does not wish to retain them in his hands. The lady rises to receive him unless an invalid, or of advanced age. If she extends her hand he takes it respectfully without removing his glove. He never offers his hand first. If the call be a hasty one he seldom seats himself, but takes leave soon after another gentleman enters. The lady retains her seat and bows her adieux, without extending her hand a second time. Hand-shaking is falling into disuse in ordinary visits.

A lady never accompanies a gentleman to the door of the drawing-room, much less to the vestibule, unless she has a profound respect for him. She introduces him to no one unless there is a special reason for the formality, but he converses with her guests as if he had met them before.

No after recognition is warranted between gentlemen, or between ladies, and certainly not between a lady and gentleman, until they shall meet again in the drawing-room, when the gift of mutual speech is resumed.

If the parties desire to be presented to each other, the opportunity is afforded them at these casual meetings. The hostess cannot easily refuse this formality if she be asked to perform it; and, if the acquaintance be mutually agreeable, it is well; but, if not, the lady can terminate it speedily between herself and a gentleman.

A gentleman always lifts his hat when offering service to a lady, as in restoring her fan or kerchief, or when opening a door that she may pass before him. She is expected simply to bow her acknowledgment.

Young gentlemen must not be over sensitive if they are not recognized on the promenade after having been hospitably entertained by a lady friend. Such omission is by no means singular where ladies entertain many visitors, and see some of their gentlemen friends rarely. It would be less frequent were young men less in the habit of making their party calls by card.

Strangers in the City. It is a rule among people of quality to call on persons newly arrived in the city. It is contrary to foreign social usage, but American society approves the custom.

If the visitor comes properly introduced, the entrance to society is easy. Strangers with proper credentials, who come as tourists or as permanent residents, will be duly called upon by hospitable citizens.

In such cases introductions are not needed. The resident ladies call between two and five o'clock, send in their cards with those of their husbands, fathers, or brothers, and a cordial interview follows. This call should be returned within a week, or an explanation sent. If the call is simply returned by a card it is understood that the strangers prefer solitude, or have reasons for not receiving visitors.

A gentleman should not make a first call upon the ladies of the family of a new-comer without an introduction or an invitation. His lady friend, or kinswoman, may leave his card, and he may receive an invitation, verbal or written, to make the new acquaintance. Under such circumstances the usual formality of introduction may be made by his second visiting card, which he will send in to announce himself at the time of his call, provided he pays his respects to the new household unaccompanied by a common friend.

A stranger cannot call first upon an old resident, unless a meeting and mutual liking should pave the way to it. Good feeling may prepare the way for either to make the initiatory visit. This etiquette is based upon the supposition that the elder lady belongs to a larger circle of friends, and has more pressing social duties than the younger one. If the parties are equal in age and position, the one whose reception day arrives earliest should receive the first call.

Aged gentlemen or ladies, an eminent personage or clergyman, always receive the first call. It is proper to leave a card for them, even when they are known to be too much engaged either to receive in person or to return calls of ceremony. The card signifies respectful and appreciative remembrance.

Visiting and Visiting Cards for Ladies. The visiting card conveys a subtle and unmistakable meaning. It can express perfect breeding. It is the safest herald of an introduction for a stranger. Its text should be fine, and its engraving a plain script.

In every case where there is no title there should be the prefix "Mrs." or "Miss," the name being in clear letters of medium size.

The card etiquette of America is different from that of countries where rank and title are inherited. The same formalities prevail throughout the United States except in Washington, where social customs are modified by the presence of foreign ambassadors.

Letters of introduction are not so much used as formerly. An acquaintance to be formed between strangers may be arranged by card where personal presentation is inconvenient. The introducing lady writes on the upper left-hand corner of her own visiting card the formula: "Introducing Mrs. Charles Browne."

This card is enclosed in an envelope of fine quality with that of the lady desiring the introduction, and sent by post or messenger. The lady who receives the two cards must call in person, or, if this be impossible, some member of the family must call, or a letter be sent by special messenger to explain the omission. Nothing less than this can be done without offending the introducing party.

If the call is made upon the sender of the two cards, not more than three days should intervene between this courtesy and the introduction, unless an "at home" day is mentioned either on the visiting-card or during the interview. If no special courtesies are extended, and the introduced lady resides at a distance, she must leave a card with P. P. C. (pour prendre congé) written on it to give information of her departure; but if the acquaintance has gone no further than one visit each, she need not call again, and her leave-taking card closes the courtesy. If she be a resident of the city, she may include the new acquaintance in her formal visiting-list, and invite her to receptions; but she cannot first ask the acquaintance, whom she has herself desired, to a breakfast, luncheon, or dinner. The first hospitality is a privilege that is very properly reserved to the one who has received an unsought acquaintance.

After a personal introduction, the oldest resident may, if she choose, leave a card, which must be similarly acknowledged within a week, unless a visiting day is engraved or written upon the card of the first caller, when that special occasion cannot be overlooked without a return card or a written apology. No further visiting is necessary, unless mutually convenient or agreeable. When a lady changes her residence, she may leave her card with her new address, upon those to whom she owes visits, or send it by post. If her new residence is beyond the limits of her old visiting range, or in a disagreeable thoroughfare, her first card on formal acquaintances should not include a call.

A lady leaving for the summer, if the season be well advanced, sends her own and her family's P. P. C. cards, with her temporary address, by mail, unless she takes leave at an accidental interview. When she returns, she sends out her cards with her "at home" day on them.

A young lady about to be married leaves her card, without calling, about three weeks before the event, accompanied by her mother's, or her chaperon's card, the names not being engraved together. An independent address is left for each lady member of the household which she honors.

If a death occurs in the household of a friend, a card with any appropriate sentiment written upon it, or a bouquet of cut-flowers and a card, are sent directly. The same gentle recognition of any felicitous event, such as the birth of a child, a private wedding, the entering of a new house, etc., is a pleasant, but not rigid, etiquette among friends and admirers.

Among acquaintances the card only, with no intruding expressions upon it, is left, either with or without flowers—usually without when a sorrow has fallen upon a family. This card may be that of a stranger even; but it is never sent, and always left in person, or is carried by a special messenger, as a more delicate recognition of the grave event.

This etiquette is not a necessity, it is only a proof of gentle breeding and refined manners, and is growing in special favor.

Cards are always first left in the hall when entering a reception. This custom makes the debtor and creditor list of the entertainer easier to arrange, because announcing names is rarely done in American cities; and, even if it were, in large circles the memory must be excellent that can retain all the faces of those who accept these courtesies. Provided an invitation to a party or a reception is necessarily declined after having been accepted, cards are sent by messenger upon the same evening, and an explanatory note is forwarded the next day, when more leisure will make its excuses and its regrets comprehensible.

An invitation-card and a reply to it may go by post, but a card of sympathy or of congratulation cannot. This must be left in person, if possible, otherwise by special messenger.

The forms and qualities of cards, and their style of engraving, are a matter in which a delicate taste is not thrown away.

The husband's card should accompany that of his wife upon all formal occasions, but it is no longer stylish for both names to be engraved upon the same card, except directly after marriage the mother's and the eldest daughter's names are always engraved on the same card during the first season of the young lady's appearance in society, and afterward, if agreeable, in the following form:

Mrs. Henry Brigham.

Miss Brigham.

No. — Van Ness Avenue.

If there is more than one daughter in society, "Misses Brigham" is a proper form to use. When a son has entered society, his mother leaves his card with her husband's and her own, to signify that it is expected he will be included in the next season's invitations. After he receives one invitation from a lady, he is presumed to be capable of managing his own social matters by making his party call, and leaving his own card and address.

Not longer than a week must elapse before the cards of all who have been invited, whether the invitation was accepted or not, are to be left by some member of the family, upon both host and hostess, and also upon any one for whom the entertainment may have been given. A single lady member of the family may perform this social duty of returning cards of thanks and congratulations upon the success of the fête.

Gentlemen cannot assist in these social arrangements, and thus relieve the lady members of the family. They may, however, leave a lady's card at a house of sorrow, but not after a festivity.

Card Etiquette and Visiting Customs for Gentlemen. A gentleman having been introduced to a lady may be uncertain whether she desires to continue the acquaintance. If he wishes it, he leaves a card, and her mother, or chaperon, sends an invitation to visit the family, or to an entertainment, after which he is expected to call and pay his respects. If the list of the lady's acquaintance be already too extensive, no notice need be taken of the card, and he will wait for further acquaintance until he meets the family again. If he be introduced by card or by letter, he calls upon the lady, inquires for the ladies of the family, and sends in his own card, carefully addressed, along with that which introduces him. He is received, if the introducing party be properly respected.

When a gentleman is presented to a lady the presentation is understood to be complimentary, and she may simply say "Thank you," without asking for a continuance of the acquaintance. When he meets her again, he must await her recognition without seeming to do so. When she bows, he can express his thanks by his manner. If she is pleased with his address or with his position, she may ask him to call upon her. As a well-bred unmarried lady cannot do this, the young gentleman must bide his time by leaving his card, as before intimated.

This arrangement renders the making of acquaintances an easy affair, provided it is agreeable to both persons, and it is a wall of defense against strange and unwelcome visitors. However unpleasant the result may be of an attempt to make a lady's acquaintance in this manner, every true gentleman will recognize the necessity of barriers across the sacred threshold of home.

The style of the gentleman's card, and his address, often secure acceptability when combined with the recollection of the host or hostess who made the presentation.

The hostess observes the hour of a gentleman's formal call. If he be a business man, his first call is between half-past eight and nine in the evening. If not, he calls between two and five in the afternoon. Calls should not be made at half-past seven for fear the lady will be out. Such a course is sure to displease a high-bred young hostess, since it proves he is either ignorant of etiquette or is careless of it.

A gentleman leaves his card for both host and hostess within a week after an entertainment to which he has been invited, whether he has accepted or declined the hospitality. If he cannot call the card is imperative.

Invitations to parties, balls, receptions and kettle-drums, should all be answered, and then there can be no misunderstanding.

A gentleman introducing another by card, sends his own with that of the person introduced. It may be sent by post, and its reception must be recognized within three days, or an explanation and an offer of courtesies to the stranger must be sent by special messenger. After this the acquaintance may continue, or may cease if the receiver of the introductory card deem no further civility necessary to the presenting person.

A gentleman may leave his card for a bereaved friend, or in other delicate ways signify his sympathy, but unless the friendship be a very familiar one he should not write to him of the bereavement, or speak to him of it when they meet.

A gentleman never makes a formal call without asking to see all the ladies of the family. He sends in or leaves his card for each individual. If he be calling upon a young lady who is a guest in a household with whom he has no acquaintance, he must ask to see her hostess at the same time, and also send her his card. This hostess of his friend may decline interrupting his visit with her presence, but it is considered elegant and hospitable for her to descend before his visit terminates, to assure him that her guest's friends are welcome to her house.

When he desires to see a lady whom he meets in society, she may, if the acquaintance warrants it, and she has been out in society one full season, receive him without the presence of her mother or chaperon, and he may not construe this informality into an indelicacy. It is a standard of social freedom that is proper to an American.

The mother is likely to excuse herself. She knows the constantly expressed desire to see herself is complimentary and respectful, and as such the well-bred lady usually receives it; but should she appear, and remain during the entire visit, all the same, he must be agreeable to her, and ask for her every time he calls.

General Directions for Cards and Calling. A call in person should not be returned by a card.

After cards have been left once in the season, they need not be left again, excepting after an invitation, or upon a guest stopping in the house.

A gentlemen invited by a lady to call upon her cannot, without showing her great discourtesy, neglect to pay the call within a week. He is not obliged to repeat it, or to do more than leave his card at her door.

Cards and invitations sent by post should be removed from their stamped envelopes before putting them in the card-receiver.

The rule found in books on etiquette, "Visiting cards can under no circumstances be sent by post, or delivered in envelopes at the door," is in a fair way of becoming a dead rule. It has always had its exceptions.

When a lady receives weekly, a resident, desirous of calling upon her, cannot make a first call on the reception day, unless asked to call on that day.

After such a card has once been left, one is at liberty to call the following season on the same day, unless a card has been left or sent in the meantime with the day changed.

Persons living in the same neighborhood should select the same day for receiving. It is too much to expect your friends to remember the days that are not arranged for particular localities, and wanting in thoughtfulness for their convenience as well.

In respect to the San Francisco custom of all ladies having stated days for receiving, a noble lady writing on etiquette, says: "To receive visitors on a stated day in each week is only to be justified by the exigencies of a lofty position." To this we might add for social use: "Unless the convenience of callers is studied by the uniting of an entire neighborhood on a given day." The day fixed by the oldest resident should be adopted by all.

One cannot return the calls of elderly ladies, or even of their equals in age, by leaving cards at the door. It is not considered respectful. If the cards of persons much younger are left after hospitalities extended to them, one is at liberty to make a card serve for a return visit.

A call upon persons in mourning, and all cards of condolence should be returned with mourning cards when the family begin to make their appearance in public. Calls upon a bereaved family should be made within ten days by intimate friends, and within a month by mere acquaintances. Those who wish to leave cards only inquire after the health of the family, leaving cards in person.

Calls are due to the newly married, and also to the parents who have sent the invitations.

Turning the upper right corner of a card implies a visit.

Turning the upper left corner, congratulations.

Turning the lower right corner, adieu.

Turning the lower left corner, condolence.

Turning the entire left end, a call on the family.

R. S. V. P. means "Please answer."

P. P. C. "To take leave."

Not more than three cards should be left at the same time on the members of the same family.

The Kettle-drum. A kettle-drum is understood to be a light entertainment with demí-toilette for both ladies and gentlemen. It is said to have originated in garrisons in England and India, where a drumhead is often made to do duty for a tea-table. They have become popular in metropolitan social circles, where ladies of fanciful disposition have provided little exercises suggestive of afternoon parties in camp. Sometimes a tiny drum is beaten at intervals in the vicinity of the tea-table, where a lady of the household, or a favorite friend, presides.

Sometimes a young lady, costumed as a vivandière, sits or stands by the tea-urn as its presiding genius. These picturesque additions to an ordinary afternoon reception are often very pleasing.

The "at home" is seldom engraved on a reception-card for a simple entertainment, unless it be after a wedding. If a series of receptions are to be given, the lower line on the left of the card may be simply: "Tuesdays in December, from three to seven o'clock."

These cards are sent in two envelopes. Less formal receptions or "at homes" may be signified by writing the day or days and hours for receiving upon the left corners of visiting cards, and possibly adding "kettle-drum." These are sent by post in a single wrapper. If two or more ladies are to receive with the hostess, their cards may or may not be inclosed with that of the lady of the house, according to inclination.

At a "kettle-drum," after the formal salutations are made, if there be not a crowd of guests, a tray with tea, cream and sugar is presented almost immediately by a domestic, and another servant offers simple refreshments to accompany it. If the rooms be filled, the guest is asked to seek tea at the table where it is served. Some hostesses invite a bevy of young society girls of their acquaintance to serve her guests with tea and refreshments, and to entertain them while they are eating; and they often wear coquettish caps, pretty aprons, and short dresses, to show their slippers and gay stockings. Formal leave-taking at kettle-drums is not expected; as they are a condensation of calls, after-calls can be omitted.

Parties, Balls, and Germans. Although all evening parties are expected to include dancing, it is desirable that the word dancing should be engraved on the corner of the card of invitation, and the hour of commencing. The ball is of course only for dancing, and ends always with a substantial supper.

The hours mentioned in notes of invitation to balls is usually from half-past nine to half-past eleven, but from nine to half-past nine are the favorite hours named in notes of invitation to balls in New York. These notes are sent out from ten to twenty days in advance of the festivity, always by post, unless the lady writing is sure of her messenger. The party note or card is issued about a week or ten days prior to the appointed evening.

The ball demands the fullest of toilets which the season admits of for both ladies and gentlemen. Supper is usually served about half-past twelve o'clock. Light refreshments, such as tea, coffee, chocolate, lemonade and bouillon, and also punches and wines, should be accessible during the entire evening.

The hostess sends out her invitations to either ball or party after calling by card or in person upon all her proposed guests to whom she is socially indebted. They are handsomely engraved in script, and issued in her own name for a ball, but in both her own and her husband's name for a party.

The following is the fashionable formula for the ball:

MRS. ALBERT MORGAN

Requests the pleasure of your presence on Thursday evening, December fifth, at half-past nine o'clock.

Dancing.

No. — Vernon Place.

The party invitation not only indicates an earlier hour for arriving, but instead of the simple word "Dancing" in the left corner it may be engraved "Dancing at eleven."

Of course this invitation must be accepted or declined within two or three days after its reception. The form of acceptance or regret is written in the name or names of the party invited:

MR. AND MRS. FREDERICK SMITHFIELD

Accept with pleasure [or decline with sincere regret]

MRS. FARQUHAR ALEXANDER'S

Kind invitation for January third.

No. — Taylor Street.

The wife enters the drawing-room on her husband's right arm, or the eldest lady occupies this position, provided the lady be not married, and there be more than one lady accompanying the gentleman. It is becoming more and more the custom for the lady to enter the ball-room unassisted.

When passing in or out of an apartment the lady precedes the gentleman by a step, unless she retains his arm.

The guests find friends after greeting the hostess, until young ladies are engaged for the dance. When applying for the honor of dancing with a young lady, it is done with a polite recognition of the office and authority of the chaperon on the part of the gentleman who asks the pleasure.

The gentleman returns the lady directly to the care of her married or older lady friend, as soon as the dance is finished. He may linger here to converse with her if he desire, but the rules of the best society do not permit of his doing so elsewhere. If he takes the young lady to the dining-room, it is customary for the chaperon to go with them.

A gentleman is not as free as the lady at this moment. If he accompanies a lady or party of ladies, he must first be certain that they are properly attended at this important moment, before he can offer his services to others.

A lady cannot accept the attentions of any other gentleman in the supper-room, except the host, or some other member of his family. If her escort be forgetful of her requirements, she must ask a servant only for whatever she may want.

While the hostess is receiving, no person should remain beside her, excepting the members of her family who receive with her, or such friends as she has designated to assist her. All persons entering should pass on to make room for others, those who wish to show her any attention seeking her later, when she is disengaged.

Ceremonious leave-taking at balls is not necessary, unless the hostess or some member of the family is conveniently near at the moment of departure. Gentlemen who go from one ball to another on the same night, as in London, dispense entirely with the formality.

These formalities of a private ball apply also to a public entertainment for dancing, and they must be followed in the latter case with even severer strictness.

Calls after a ball are made on the hostess on the first of her regular reception days after receiving her hospitalities, or after having been compelled to decline the hospitality. If she have no fixed reception day, a card should be left for her within ten days after the entertainment.

Dinners and Dining Out. The lady who purposes giving a dinner makes a catalogue of all those whom she desires to invite to her house. From these she selects and groups those whom she thinks will be agreeable to one another from similarity of tastes, station, age, or habits. Mental accomplishments should, and they do at the present day, enter largely into the selection.

When a dinner is given in honor of some one not unmistakably famous, the choice of guests is comparatively easy, those who are not invited understanding the reason to be the lack of affiliation with the chief guest, and therefore forbearing all inquiries regarding the reason.

It is customary for those who give dinners often to have cards of invitation engraved, with blanks for names and dates. On an extra card, in the same envelope, should be the following form:

To meet

MR. ROBERT JENNINGS,
Of Philadelphia.

If the dinner be very grand and formal, the guest well known, and there is little time for pre-arrangement, the honored person's name is engraved on the card of invitation, and sent out eight or ten days in advance. The replies should be immediate so that vacancies may be filled. If there is the slightest doubt about being able to be present, the invitation must be declined. If it be accepted, and an insurmountable obstacle comes in between the guest and the dinner, instant explanations must be made, as an empty chair at a feast is a depressing object, and usually leaves some lady without an escort, or some gentleman alone.

Invitations to a dinner are given in the name of both host and hostess. If it be an engraved card or note, the name of host and hostess occupies one line, extending across the card; the request follows, in smaller script, with the name of the invited person or persons written across in a blank space arranged by the engraver. Below this are the date and hour of the dinner.

Until very recently, the initials R. S. V. P. (Répondez, s'il vous plait) have been engraved upon all formal cards, but they are less and less frequently seen. To thus ask, or even remind, a lady or gentleman that an invitation should be answered, is a faint reproach upon their breeding.

The only place where R. S. V. P. may be written with strict etiquette and propriety, is to an informal note which the receiver might otherwise place among the unconsidered trifles of social life, but which, for some adequate reason, the sender desires to have answered.

The word "company" is used in an invitation to dinner, but "presence" is preferred in a card that invites a guest to a wedding. The day of the week is written in letters, but the day of the month may be in numerals if preferred.

An engraved request sent to an acquaintance is usually in one of the following forms:

MR. AND MRS. HORACE WALBRIDGE

Request the pleasure of

..... Company

At Dinner on

..... 187 , at o'clock.

No. — Pacific Avenue.

Or,

MR. AND MRS. HORACE WALBRIDGE

Request the pleasure of

.....

Company at Dinner

On

At seven o'clock.

No. — Pacific Avenue.

If a note is engraved, a monogram or crest may be placed at the middle of the top of the sheet. If a card is used, it is in better form to place this device only on the envelope. Monograms and ciphers are oftener used than crests in this country.

The engraved form of invitation to a dinner, given in honor of a noted person, reads:

MR. AND MRS. ERNEST RENFREW

Request the pleasure of

.....

Company on Tuesday,

January 20th, at seven o'clock, to meet the

HON. MR. AND MRS. HAVERSTICK.

No. — California Street.

The following form is used as a prompt response:

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM BENTLEY
Accept with pleasure
Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Renfrew's invitation to dinner
At seven o'clock, Tuesday evening,
January 20th.

A response should express a feeling of disappointment as follows:

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM BENTLEY
Request that a previous engagement
[or illness, or some misfortune,] Prevents the acceptance of
Mr. and Mrs. Renfrew's invitation
For Tuesday, January 20th.

The degree of intimacy of the acquaintance regulates, to a certain extent, the form of the reply. Regret is always presumed to be genuine.

Guests should arrive punctually from five to ten minutes before the dinner-hour, the hostess in all probability not being able to receive them earlier. Later than this does not allow proper time for introductions, and the arrangement of escorts.

If the guests know one another, cards can be handed on a tray by a servant at the door. He selects the one with his own, and a lady's name, and after greeting the hostess, seeks his partner, and awaits the announcement of dinner. If the guests are unacquainted, the hostess suggests to each gentleman his partner, presents him, and tells him whether his place at table is at the right or left of the hostess.

Cards, either plain or ornamental, according to the taste or the ceremoniousness of the dinner, are laid at each lady's and gentleman's plate, with their names upon them. The menu card is usually hidden beneath it.

The dinner is announced by the chief waiter, who stands at the entrance to the drawing-room which opens toward the dining-room, and bows to the host. The latter is alert, anticipating the information. He offers his left arm to the lady-in-chief for this particular occasion. She may be the wife of the eldest gentleman, or the especially honored guest, as before explained. He proceeds first, and his guests follow him to the dining-room, his wife entering last with the gentleman entitled to most consideration. Each pair find their assigned position by the card which awaits them, assisted by the information previously furnished by the host in regard to the side of the table chosen for them. This is done as quietly as possible, as nothing is less elegant than a bustling manner.

When the dinner is over the hostess bows to the lady at the right of the host, rises, and the guests rise also. The gentlemen either stand until the ladies leave, or conduct them to the door, and return. It is good form, but not incumbent to escort the ladies to the drawing-room. The gentlemen smoke in the dining-room, or in an apartment provided for the purpose, not remaining long from the drawing-room.

Coffee is served at table after the dessert, or in the drawing-room half an hour later. In the latter case the hostess usually sits by the coffee-urn, and the gentlemen may carry the coffee-cups to the ladies, followed by a servant, who bears a tray, upon which are sugar, cream, and often a handsome, low cut-glass caraffe of brandy.

Guests may leave after coffee, and should not in any event linger more than two hours. A person desiring to leave before the rest should inform the hostess beforehand, and then leave without formal adieux.

Etiquette requires a call on the hostess within a week after the dinner, or before, if she have a stated reception-day sooner. If the reception-day is not convenient, cards can be left in person (the right side or right-hand upper corner turned over), for each grown member of the family.

Gentlemen without wives, mothers, or sisters to carry their cards for them, are permitted by the strictest approving etiquette to send them by post. Of course this is only done when a call in person, or by the hand of a relative, is impossible.

A lady goes to a dinner-party in whatever is considered full toilette for that season, and the gentlemen also. Gloves are removed after being seated at the table, and need not be replaced again during the evening.

Breakfasts, Luncheons and Suppers. The hour for giving a breakfast varies according to its formality from half-past nine till twelve, the latter hour being only allowable where elegance rather than sociability is studied. Macaulay said: "Dinner parties are mere formalities, but you invite a man to breakfast because you want to see him." Both gentlemen and ladies may be guests at the breakfast-table, but ladies only usually receive invitations to a luncheon-party. The breakfast is more social and enjoyable than dinner.

Invitations to a breakfast, not too formal, are written, and need not be issued more than five days in advance of an entertainment.

The style of the note may be quite as informal as any brief but friendly letter, or it may be the lady's visiting-card which conveys the request, if this card be engraved after the customary form prevailing in New York, with the address in the right-hand lower corner, and the ordinary day for receiving callers upon the left. Below the lady's name be written:

BREAKFAST AT TEN O'CLOCK,
January 12th.

If another than the usual "at home" day be preferred, an ink line may be drawn through the engraved day of the week, and the following form is written upon the card:

BREAKFAST, FRIDAY, AT TEN O'CLOCK,
January 12th.

Numerals are written upon a card, but they are not engraved, except it be the number of a residence.

This breakfast should never be elaborate, but it cannot be too dainty in its food, or in the appointments of the table. Walking costumes are worn by both gentlemen and ladies, also visiting-gloves, which are removed at table. The descent from the dressing-room and greetings between the hostess and guest are just the same as at a dinner-party.

If there are more than eight guests, cards should be placed indicating places. If the guests be unequal in number, ladies are informed of their lady-partners by the hostess, and they seek their assigned places as usual.

The host conducts to the table the eldest lady, or the one who as a bride, or for any other reason is entitled to special consideration. If there be no host, the lady of the house leads the way accompanied by the most honored guest, lady or gentleman.

The food is served from the sideboard, or upon the table in courses, according to taste or convenience, the only difference between the forms and those of a dinner being that the hostess presides over the serving of the tea, coffee and chocolate.

Guests are expected to leave half an hour after the breakfast is over.

Formal breakfasts require elaborate, but not full dress for the ladies; a morning or frock-coat for gentlemen, with light-colored trousers and waistcoats, to correspond with the coat.

The general directions for descent to the dining-room, the conduct of host and guests are the same as for a dinner.

The general rules regulating a breakfast apply equally well to a luncheon.

After a very formal breakfast, a call on the hostess is expected, according to rules elsewhere given. An informal breakfast requires no after-call.

Suppers are presumed to be for gentlemen only, and are served from nine to ten o'clock. The informalities of invitation are all of the same kind. The invitations may be verbal, or like this:

SUPPER AT TEN O'CLOCK.

Saturday, January 20.

If it is a fish supper, it is served with fruits, salads, and without a sweet dessert, with coffee, and with wines at the pleasure of the host.

A game supper is confined almost strictly to wild fowl, with wines and coffee; but the dessert may be pastry, creams, and bonbons.

A wine or champagne supper is made up of various luxuries, and differs from the dinner chiefly in the preference given to cold meats. The dessert is commonly rich and varied.

Etiquette of Weddings. Strict form does not require the announcement of an engagement, but a betrothal may be made known to friends in some pleasant manner, either by a dinner-party at the home of the bride, or at the home of the groom, at which the immediate family of the bride must be present.

Compliments by note, gifts of flowers, and calls upon the lady follow.

During the term of betrothal little parties may be given to the engaged couple by their immediate circle of friends, at which they may appear and receive friendly congratulations. This is sufficient as an announcement of the formal engagement.

The intended bride foregoes visiting during the brief interval presumed to elapse between the engagement and the wedding, except that she leaves a card in person at the residences of all her friends without entering just before the day of the ceremony. This last call is one not to be omitted.

The wedding-cards are sent out at least ten days before the ceremony is to take place. Invitations to remote places must be forwarded sooner.

The invitations to the marriage-ceremony are in the name of the bride's father and mother, or of one alone if one only be living. If the bride stands in the relationship of ward, niece, granddaughter, cousin, or simply friend, to the persons or person issuing the invitation, the fact is noted in the formula in place of the word "daughter."

Accompanying the engraved note is a card of invitation to the reception for such persons as are entitled to be bidden to partake of the festivities of the occasion.

Where the ceremony is in a church, tickets of admission may be used if it is deemed necessary, one or more of them being inclosed in the envelope with the ceremonial invitation for distribution to personal friends of the invited. It is well however, if possible, to confine the ticket distribution to immediate personal friends.

Invitations to weddings are now engraved on one sheet of paper, the separate cards of bride or groom being seldom used. The engraving is in plain script. The paper is thick, fine, and shaped so as to fold once. The cipher, monogram or crest should be at the middle of the top of the page, and not printed in color. It is now thought to be in better style to put the device on the envelope, instead of on the note. The following is a suitable formula:

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES REMINGTON

Request your presence

At the marriage of their daughter,

MISS MARIA LOUISA,

to

MR. WILLIAM HENRY JAMESON,

On Tuesday morning, September tenth, 1878,

at eleven o'clock.

Trinity Church, San Francisco.

The word "presence" is considered preferable to "company."

Another card is inclosed for more familiar friends. The following is good form for the invitation to the reception:

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES REMINGTON,

At Home,

Tuesday morning, September 10th, from half past eleven until four o'clock,

No. — Taylor Street.

The admission card is narrow, long, and neatly and plainly engraved in script:

TRINITY CHURCH,

Ceremony at eleven o'clock.

The portion of the ceremony not absolutely fixed by the church, may be tastefully varied by the parties interested. For an elaborate wedding rehearsals are desirable.

The master of ceremonies should be early present to see that the awning and carpet are not disturbed by idlers. He sees that the white ribbon is passed across the main aisle at a sufficient distance from the altar to accommodate the invited guests.

The following modern ceremonial is considered good in New York: The bridesmaids and an equal number of ushers are chosen from among the friends of both families. The ushers wait inside the church door, give their arms to the ladies as they arrive, and escort them to their seats. The gentlemen who attend the ladies follow.

When the bridal party has arranged itself for entrance, the ushers, in pairs, march slowly up to the altar and turn to the right, keeping step to the organ music. After a very slight interval the bridesmaids follow in pairs and turn to the left.

Another very brief interval of waiting, and the bride, escorted by her father, and entirely veiled, with her eyes cast down, follows her companions. The groom comes forward from the vestry-room to meet her, takes her hand, and places her at the altar. Both kneel for a moment's silent devotion. The parents stand just behind her, and slightly at the left. The service by the clergyman now proceeds as usual. All churches, at present, use the ring, and vary the sentiment of its adoption to suit the customs and ideas of their own rites. A jeweled ring has been for many years the sign and symbol of betrothal; but, among people with German tastes, a plain gold circlet, with the date of the engagement inscribed within is preferred. This can be passed by the groom to the clergyman, and used as a wedding-ring, a jeweled ring being placed on the finger of the bride soon after the service. The jewel should be perfect, even if small.

The bridal veil is rarely raised in church, and kissing in the public place is obsolete.

The bridesmaids follow the bride and groom out, each on the arm of an usher. The ushers then hasten to the place of reception to welcome the bride at her own door, and to arrange themselves about the bride and groom, in the drawing-room, half the bridesmaids standing on the side of the bride, and half on the side of the groom. The ushers wait at the door of the drawing-room for guests as they arrive from church, and present them to the newly wedded pair. If ladies are present without gentlemen, they escort them to the refreshment-room, afterwards leaving them to provide for themselves.

Bridal gifts are seldom displayed. If they are shown, it is with the names of the donors detached, to prevent invidious comparisons. The universal bridal present is a disused custom. The bride acknowledges the gift by a note in her own hand. Gifts to the bride are supposed to be in accordance with her known tastes, or of practical use. They are commonly marked with her maiden name.

Gifts that can be worn at the ceremony are considered en regle from the bride and groom to the bridesmaids and ushers.

At a morning wedding, the groom and ushers wear dark coats, and vests of corresponding color, with light trousers, and necktie, and gloves light, but not white. At an evening wedding the bride and groom retire quietly to dress for their wedding tour. At a morning wedding only bridesmaids, ushers and relatives remain to witness the departure.

It is not etiquette to inquire where the honeymoon is to be spent.

If the newly-married begin housekeeping at once, cards are issued for morning or evening receptions at no distant day, to which only such persons are invited as they desire to retain as friends. The following form of card will do:

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM HENRY JAMESON,

At Home,

Tuesday evenings in November, from eight to eleven o'clock.

No. — California Street.

On these occasions an elaborate table is not considered in re-finer taste. The bride wears a reception toilet, and the groom is in full evening dress. After an informal wedding, and to be sent to distant friends, cards are prepared in the following form and sent by post:

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES REMINGTON
Announce the marriage of their daughter,
MISS MARIA LOUISA,
and
MR. WILLIAM HENRY JAMESON,
Tuesday, October 10th, 1878.
No. — Taylor Street, San Francisco.

In response to this, a note of congratulation is usually sent to the parents of the bride, and also to the bridal pair, if the intimacy of the parties warrants it.

If there has been no reception, and a reception follows their return to town, even though the young people take possession of their own house, the mother of the bride usually gives one to them. If it be given only in the evening, cards should be issued in the name of the parents and the young people, and the two cards sent in the same envelope.

The method of entrance into church given above is approved by the best society, but the old ceremonial can be used if preferred. If there are no bridesmaids, the ushers walk into church in pairs, just in advance of the groom, and, parting at the altar, half stand at one side and half at the other. While the clergyman is congratulating the bride they become pairs again.

Weddings at home vary little from those at churches. An altar, a place for kneeling, and floral devices are easily arranged. When the marriage-ceremony is concluded, the party turn in their places, and face their friends, who wait to congratulate them. If space be of importance, the kneeling-stool, and even the floral altar, may be removed a little later, without observation. The latter, however, is usually pushed back against the wall, and adds to the decorative part of the festivity.

Calls or card-leaving, by all the guests, upon the family of the bride, is a rigorous formality within ten days after the wedding.

Opera and Theatre Parties. Strictly speaking there is nothing of this kind to advise about in San Francisco, and yet such entertainments are susceptible of giving the most thorough social enjoyment. In New York they have become very popular of late being confined almost altogether to the upper tondom. They are sometimes given by families, but most frequently they are projected by young bachelors who have no homes to which they can invite guests, and who are desirous in some such agreeable way to return the hospitalities and courteous treatment of householders.

If the party is given by a bachelor, he first secures a chaperon for the young ladies he is about to invite. If she be a relative, so much more peaceful and harmonious the proceedings.

He gives his invitations in person, first soliciting the consent of the mother to the arrangement that her daughter may be his guest for the evening, at the same time mentioning what married lady will accompany them, and furnishing the names of the gentlemen who are invited to be present.

The dinner is usually given in a private parlor of some fashionable hotel or restaurant, or in the house of some friend. The usual dinner formalities are followed, the matron of the party acting as hostess. The lady-guests, if not accompanied by father or brother, are usually attended by a waiting-woman, who returns home in the carriage to come back again for her mistress at the hour appointed, which is usually half-past twelve.

The dinner hour is usually six o'clock for this style of party. Retiring from the table, the party proceeds to the opera in carriages furnished by the host; and the gentleman assigned as dinner escort to a lady accompanies her to the opera, where boxes have necessarily been secured, because the party is in full toilette.

After the opera or theatre, the guests return to the banquetting-room for refreshments and then separate, a gentleman accompanying each young lady, provided only her serving-maid call for her with a carriage. If her father, brother or relative arrive in her carriage, the gentleman who has been her attendant during the evening escorts her to her conveyance. He should call within three days to inquire for her health, or leave a card, provided a visit be impossible.

The bachelor host is required by the laws of swell society to pay his respects, and return thanks to mother and daughter within a week for the honor and the pleasure conferred upon him by the attendance of his lady guests.

The young ladies pay an early visit of thanks to the chaperon.

Another form of the opera or theatre party, while it is an equally formal affair, is more sensible and less extravagant, as it only includes an after supper.

The host calls upon his anticipated guests, and after receiving an acceptance of his invitation—which must also include a gentleman of the family, or a near kinsman of the young lady—he leaves entrance-tickets for the proposed entertainment. The party meet in the box or boxes, where the matron selected awaits them with their host.

After the theatre, the supper, which has been ordered in advance, is served to them at some fashionable resort, and the hour for returning home is decided upon by the matron of the evening.

The host designates to each gentleman the lady he is to conduct to the table. The supper is not uncommonly followed by a few dances, but this is less often a part of the festivity at a restaurant parlor than when the bachelor receives his guests at the house of a friend.

This style of opera or theatre party is by far the most popular of the season, and is, of course, less expensive and troublesome to both host and guests. The more elaborate formalities, as was suggested, are only provided by the very rich, and mothers of refined daughters do not encourage ostentation. The customs of these costly pleasures are furnished only because they are stylish, and prescribed by "New York Etiquette" as the correct thing for young bachelors to do, who have the three requisites: Time, taste, and money.

In both forms mentioned, the young ladies are expected to be as rigorously attentive to the duty they owe their chaperon, as if attending a ceremonious dinner, and the host is required to as carefully follow the proper formalities of calling as if a banquet had been given instead of a supper.

From eight to twelve guests are the usual number, the smallness of the circle, or coterie, being its greatest recommendation.

Of the two entertainments, the simple theatre party will be found the most enjoyable, and in this city of clubs and club life, and theatres and theatre-going, a very graceful and satisfying thing for our young bachelors of quality to inaugurate.

If these parties are given by a lady in her own house, the invitations are issued by informal written notes in her own name, and the dinner almost invariably precedes the public amusement.

After the opera or theater, it is proper for her to invite her guests to a restaurant for light refreshment, but she oftener than otherwise begs them to return to her own residence, where a dainty supper awaits them. A lady guest may, however, excuse herself from this after part of the hospitality if she pleases, and not give offense. Party calls in the usual manner.

If private theatricals or music is to be a part or all of the entertainment at a gentleman's residence, the word theatricals, or musical, is written upon the left lower part of the card of invitation. If the pleasure be accepted, a prompt attendance is compulsory.

If dancing is to follow, the hour of its commencement is also mentioned. It may be written across the card of invitation in this wise:

Theatricals at eight o'clock: dancing at eleven.

If the company is desired to wear fancy dress, or be masked, the words fancy dress, or bal masque, may be written at the left lower side.

Theatre Etiquette for Gentlemen. In inviting a lady to accompany you to the theatre, opera, a concert, or any other public place of amusement, send the invitation the day previous to the one selected for taking her, and write it in the third person. If it is the first time you have invited her, include her mother, sister or some other lady in the invitation.

If she accepts your invitation, let it be your next care to secure good seats, for it is but a poor compliment to invite a lady to go to a place of amusement, and put her in an uncomfortable seat, where she can neither hear, see, nor be seen; especially the latter.

Although, when alone, you will act a courteous part in giving your seat to a strange lady, who is standing in a crowded concert-room, you should not do so when you are with a lady. By giving up your place beside her, you may place a lady next her, whom she will find an unpleasant companion, and you are yourself separated from her, when the conversation between the acts makes one of the greatest pleasures of an evening spent in this way. In case of accident, too, it gives her the appearance of having come alone. Your first duty when you are escorting a lady, is to the lady before all others.

When you are with a lady at a place of amusement, you must not leave your seat until you rise to escort her home. If at the opera, you may invite her to promenade between the acts, but if she declines, you remain in your seat.

Let your conversation be in a tone that will not disturb those seated near you, unless you consider yourself part of the performance.

Any lover-like airs or attitudes, although you may have the right to assume them, are in excessively bad taste in public.

If the evening you have appointed be a stormy one, you must call for your companion with a carriage, and this is the more elegant way of taking her even if the weather does not make it absolutely necessary.

When you are entering a concert-room, or the box of a theatre, walk before your companion up the aisle, until you reach the seats you have secured; then turn, offer your hand to her, and place her in the inner seat, taking the outside one yourself; in going out, if the aisle is too narrow to walk two abreast, you again precede your companion until you reach the lobby, when you turn and offer your arm.

Secure your programme, libretto, or concert-bill, before taking your seat, as, if you leave it, in order to obtain them, you may find some one else occupying your place when you return. Or, you may find a lady in your seat, in which case, you have no alternative, but must accept the penalty of your carelessness, by standing all the evening.

If your seats are secured, call for your companion in time to be seated three or four minutes before the performance commences; but if you are visiting a hall where you cannot engage seats, it is best to go early.

If you are alone and see ladies present with whom you are acquainted, you may, with perfect propriety, go and chat with them between the acts, but when with a lady, never leave her to speak to another lady.

Never, unless urgently solicited, attach yourself to any party at a place of amusement, even if some of the members of it are your own relatives or intimate friends.

Ladies' Theatre Invitations. A young lady may, if she wishes to attend a party, ball or concert, or other place where an escort is required, and is provided with no suitable one, write to her affianced husband, or, if she is not engaged, to some friend of the other sex with whom she is on sufficiently intimate terms to venture to take such a liberty, and request him to accompany her.

If any expense is to be incurred in thus attending her, she should purchase the admission cards and inclose them in her note to him. Such a note may read as follows:

Miss Ida Avery presents her compliments to Mr. Charles Moore, and requests him to do her the favor of escorting her to the California on Friday evening the 15th, if he has not a previous engagement. Inclosed please find tickets of admission.

When the parties are on the terms of intimacy usual between an affianced couple, a less ceremonious form of invitation is allowable.

Miscellaneous Rules. "Decorum," says a French writer, "is nothing less than the respect of one's self and others brought to bear upon every circumstance of life." In all relations, whether social or domestic, anything approaching coarseness, undue familiarity or levity of conduct is prolific of evil.

The proper giving and receiving of gifts may be almost styled an intuition which every one does not possess. A generous person may unwittingly wound where he intends to confer nothing but gratification. A grateful person may, through want of tact, seem almost to deprecate the liberality of the giver.

A gift should always have some other value to the receiver than its mere price. "Our tokens of love," says Emerson, "are, for the most part, barbarous, cold and lifeless, because they do not represent our life. The only gift is a portion of thyself. Therefore, let the farmer give his corn; the miner, a gem; the sailor, coral and shells; the painter, his picture; and the poet, his poem."

A present should never be given with an expectation of a return. Nor should the recipient of a present ever be reminded of it by the giver.

In presenting a book to a friend do not write his or her name in it, unless requested.

Unmarried ladies should not accept presents from gentlemen to whom they are neither related nor engaged. A married lady may occasionally accept a present from a gentleman who is indebted to her for hospitality.

Presents made by a married lady to a gentleman, should be in the name of both herself and her husband.

Never refuse a gift if offered in kindliness, unless the circumstances are such that you cannot with propriety or consistency receive it. On the other hand, never make a gift which is really beyond or out of proportion to your means.

Acknowledge the receipt of a present immediately, accompanying the acknowledgment by sincere, yet not too extravagant thanks. If you employ the latter, your sincerity may with good reason be doubted.

Do not make it a religious duty, so to speak, to return a present at once. You are justified in supposing that the gift has been offered for the purpose of affording you a pleasure, not with the expectation of a return, like a commercial transaction.

In society all should receive equal attention, the young as well as the old. The natural gaucherie of young girls results more from the slights which they are constantly receiving, and constantly expecting to receive, than from any real awkwardness inherent in their age.

Always give precedence to those older or of higher position than yourself unless they request you take the precedence, when it is more polite to obey than to adhere to the strict rule of etiquette, since compliance with and adherence to the wishes of others display the finest breeding. In matters of precedence be more careful to give others their rank than to take your own.

Always express your own opinions with modesty, and, if called upon, defend them, but without that warmth which may lead to hard feelings. Do not enter into argument. Having spoken your mind, and thus shown you are not cowardly in your beliefs or opinions, drop the subject and lead to some other topic. There is seldom any profit in discussion.

In meeting people more than once in a public promenade, it is only necessary to salute them the first time in passing.

It is now entirely out of date to ask another at the dinner-table to drink wine with you. Each drinks at his own option, and as little as he chooses. If a person declines, he should by no means be pressed to take more. If he refuses to drink it altogether, he has a perfect right to do so, and no notice should be taken of the fact.

It is neither polite nor respectful to smoke in the presence of ladies, even though they have given permission. In truth, a gentleman will never ask such permission. Neither will he smoke in any room which ladies are in the habit of frequenting. This is etiquette, but not comfort.

Always request a favor. Never issue a command, even if you have the authority to compel the observance of your wishes. Always recognize a favor, even from an inferior, with courteous thanks.

A gentleman may keep his hat on when handing a lady to a carriage, certain rules of etiquette to the contrary notwithstanding. Indeed, for him to do otherwise, and at the same time give proper assistance to the lady, he would find it necessary to have a dozen hands.

Never affect superiority. In the company of an inferior never let him feel his inferiority. If you invite an inferior as your guest, treat him with all the politeness and consideration you would show an equal. Assumption of superiority is the distinguishing trait of a parvenu.

Conform your conduct as far as possible to the company you chance to be with, only do not throw yourself into improper company. It is related of a certain king that he once turned his tea into a saucer and drank it thus because two country ladies whom he was entertaining did so. That king comprehended the true spirit of a gentleman. It is better even to laugh at and join in with vulgarity, so that it do not degenerate into indecency, than to set yourself up as better and better-mannered than those with whom you may chance to be associated. True politeness and genuine good manners often not only permit but absolutely demand a temporary violation of the ordinary obligations of etiquette.

Never address a mere acquaintance by his Christian name. He will have reason to take offense at your presumption. No lady will speak of a gentleman by his surname without the customary prefix of Mr.

Never speak of your husband or wife by their initial letter. Among very intimate friends it may be allowable to mention them by their Christian names, but among strangers and mere acquaintances they should always be referred to as Mr. or Mrs. —. It is not even allowable to mention them as “my wife” or “my husband.”

On entering a room bow slightly as a general salutation before speaking to each of the persons assembled.

“Civility,” says Lord Chesterfield, “is particularly due to all women; and remember that no provocation whatsoever can justify any man in not being civil to every woman; and the greatest man would justly be reckoned a brute if he were not civil to the meanest woman. It is due to their sex, and is the only protection they have against the superior strength of ours.”

Bishop Beveridge says, “Never speak of a man’s virtues before his face or his faults behind his back.”

Another maxim is, “In private watch your thoughts; in your family watch your temper; in society watch your tongue.”

How to Carve.—As nearly all formal dinners are now served a la Russe, carving is not the accomplishment that it was. Formerly in England there were regular teachers of the art, and Lady Mary Wortly Montague confesses that she once took lessons of a professor three times a week.

Even at the present day one often attends or gives a family or old-fashioned dinner, and the few hints below will always be found of value to the novice in his first struggles with the big knife and fork:

Dr. Johnson said, that “You should praise, not ridicule, your friend who carves with as much earnestness of purpose as though he were legislating."

The best way to cut a ham, in order that the fat and lean may be served evenly, is to begin in the middle of the ham, and cut out thin circular slices. Good carvers, though, often begin at the large end of the ham.

In carving a roast sirloin of beef, you may begin at either end, or in the middle. The outside should be sliced downward to the bone, while the inside or tenderloin part should be sliced thin, lengthwise, and a little of the soft fat given with each piece. You may ask whether the outside or inside is preferred; otherwise a small bit of the inside should be served with each plate, as this is generally regarded as the most choice portion.

But little skill is required in carving a round of beef. It should be cut in thin, smooth, and even slices.

A fillet of veal should be cut in the same way as a round of beef. Ask whether the brown or outside is preferred. If it is stuffed, cut deep through the stuffing, and serve each plate with a thin slice.

In carving a leg of mutton, slice it lightly, for if you press too heavily the knife will not cut, and you will squeeze out all the gravy, and serve your guests with dry meat. Begin to cut in the middle, as that is the most juicy part. Cut thin, deep slices, and help each person to some of the brown or outside.

In carving a fore quarter of lamb, separate the shoulder from the breast and ribs, by passing the knife under and through it; then separate the gristly part from the ribs, and help from that, or the ribs, as may be chosen.

A haunch of mutton is the leg and a part of the loin. In carving, help to about equal parts of the fat of the loin, and the lean of the leg. Cut each part directly down through in slices, about a quarter of an inch thick.

A saddle of mutton should be cut in thin slices from tail to end, beginning close to the back-bone.

A roast pig should be cut in two before it is sent to the table. Begin to carve by separating the shoulder from one side, then divide the ribs. The joints may be divided, or pieces cut from them. The ribs are considered the finest part, though some prefer the neck end.

In carving a duck or goose, cut off the apron, or the part directly under the neck, and outside of the merry-thought. Then turn the neck-end towards you, and cut the breast in slices. Take off the leg by putting the fork into the small end of the bone, pressing it to the body, at the same time passing the knife into and through the joint. Take off the wing by putting the fork into the small end of the pinion, and pressing it close to the body while the knife is dividing the joint. The wing side-bones, and also the back and lower side-bones, should then be cut off. The best pieces are the breast and thighs.

A turkey or chicken is carved by first detaching the legs from the body. Next, take off the wings, by dividing the joint with the knife; then lift up the pinion with your fork, and draw the wing towards the leg, and the muscles will separate in a better form than if cut. Then remove the merry-thought from the neck-bones, and divide the breast from the carcass by cutting through the tender-ribs. Then lay the back upwards, and cut it across half-way between the neck and the rump. The breast and thighs are considered the choice bits.

Nearly all kinds of small game birds are carved by simply cutting them in two, from the neck to the tail, unless they are given whole.

Never pour gravy over white meat, as it would destroy its delicate appearance. Another excellent idea is to keep it off the table-cloth.

There are many little ways of seasoning meats and game, which may be done by the carver, as, for instance: before cutting up a duck, slice the breast, and pour over the gashes a few spoonfuls of sauce made of port wine, lemon juice, salt, and Cayenne pepper. Or, after you have cut off the apron and breast-bone of a goose, pour into the body a glass of port wine and a small teaspoonful of mustard. Experience will furnish you with many other points that will finally make you an artist.

THE WHITE HOUSE.

"The glass of fashion, and the mould of form."

AMONG American ladies, who are remarkable throughout the world for style and elegance in dressing, those of San Francisco are conspicuous. There are many reasons for this, not the least of which—next of course to the to the correct taste of our ladies of fashion themselves—is the completeness of our dressmaking establishments, and the skill of San Francisco dressmakers. No dry goods establishment has helped so much to cultivate taste in artistic apparel as the White House, very properly called the elite dry goods house of the city. Its stock of goods is selected by competent buyers in the best markets in the world, and includes an unlimited variety of fine fabrics, and articles for ladies' use and wear. The White House is well furnished and appointed, but changes are contemplated which will greatly increase its business, and enhance its power to gratify the desires of those who visit it. The relations of its proprietors to the fashion centers of the world are close and intimate. They bring the latest styles from France, which, as the mistress of fashion, rules the world. During the coming season, they will keep in Paris Madame Max, their accomplished fitter, to supply the wants of patrons. Outside the dressmaking department, without which no dry goods store is now considered complete, their stock, in all departments, as already remarked, is ample, and intelligently selected by trained buyers in Europe. The true lady takes genuine pride in everything that relates to elegant housekeeping. The lines of goods for this purpose, which are to be found here, are of the newest and most desirable patterns. The hosiery department is thoroughly managed, having a full assortment of Balbriggan, with every other style of French or English hose, of the finest manufacture. The variety of ties and bows in silk is infinite. The assortment of laces is ample, among the latest, real Breton. In every line of goods the stock is freshened and renewed by constant importations. The spring is coming. In the spring a woman's fancy turns as lightly to the newest patterns in dresses as a young man's turns to "thoughts of love;" the men, of course, being simply sentimental, while the ladies are eminently practical. Great preparations are making to supply all demands, and word already comes from Paris that the spring styles are marvels of beauty, and divinely elegant. There is no reason to suppose that the enterprise shown by the White House, and its devotion to the goddess Fashion, will be unappreciated by the stylish ladies of San Francisco, Oakland and vicinity.

PHOTOGRAPHY is a branch of art in which San Francisco, aided by her serene skies and persistent suns has achieved great excellence. The photographs of her leading houses have made her known wherever the many celebrities, whose portraits they have taken, have carried and exhibited them. These pictures have oftener borne the imprint of Bradley & Rulofson than that of any other photographic firm or individual. The fame that this firm have won, and the standard of perfectness they have obtained in society and in the competitive exhibitions of the world, they still maintain unimpaired. The artists in their employ are the best obtainable. Their styles of work exhibit the same diversity and artistic quality, varying in size from the minute card to the large life-size crayon and water-color portrait. They have recently made numerous changes and additions which will make their rooms at 429 Montgomery street more attractive to patrons, and more convenient for their own purposes. These have been altered and refitted, repainted, furnished with new carpets, and in many other ways improved and beautified. The parlors have been redecorated, and new dressing-rooms for ladies have been added. The operating-rooms have an additional skylight, which is unsurpassed as regards the admission and regulating of the light. Nothing in the remodelling has been left undone which can aid in the satisfactory working of the establishment, or help to achieve new honors like those already won at the Mechanics' Fair and at the Vienna and Philadelphia Expositions, where first medals were awarded for the finest photographs on exhibition.

ARTISTIC TAILORING.

"Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy,
But not expressed in fancy; rich not gaudy;
For the apparel oft proclaims the man."

THE art of cutting garments so as to make him who wears them look like a refined gentleman, is not generally possessed by the tailors of this or any other city. There is one among us, however, who has it in an eminent degree—Henry Steil, whose place of business is at 237 Bush street, under the Occidental Hotel. This gentleman combines in his work correct taste with the more substantial qualities of fitness and durability. The materials he uses are West of England cloths, selected twice each year from samples sent him direct by the West End houses of London. His trimmings are chosen with equal care, and are intended to harmonize perfectly in color and fineness with the material of the principal garments. Nothing is allowed to go out of his establishment except it is finished and perfect. The extent of his business may be known when it is stated that he gives constant employment to over thirty skilled workmen. His taste in gentlemen's full dress suits, that formal test of a tailor's skill and judgment, is universally recognized. Mr. Steil is, perhaps, the only man in his business in this city known and recognized as an artistic workman by tailors in Chicago and New York. His skill in cutting was shown at the age of seventeen, when he was employed in a New York tailoring establishment, and since that time he has spared no pains to achieve greater completeness in style and effect. He fully realizes that nothing can be so thoroughly done as by the master, and therefore does all his cutting and fitting himself. His work includes not only all styles of elegant garments for gentlemen, but ladies' riding-habits and servants' liveries.

PERFUMES, AND TOILET ARTICLES.

"Sabeian odors from the spicy shore
Of Arabie the blest."

As Tiffany & Co. among jewelers, or Arnold, Constable & Co. among dry goods dealers, so is the firm of H. P. Wakelee & Co. among druggists and perfumers, and a visit to their well-appointed establishment will furnish proof that this reputation is well earned. Among the many novelties introduced by this firm none have so rapidly assumed the highest position in popular estimation as the well-known "Camelline." A prominent physician of this city some time since called the attention of the firm to the great injury to health caused by the various preparations in use for the improvement of the complexion, nearly all of which contain large quantities of lead, mercury and other active poisons. A series of careful and expensive experiments were at once instituted for the purpose of discovering a substitute for these objectionable compounds, and the success which has crowned their efforts will be appreciated when it is stated that "Camelline," as shown by chemical analysis, is not only free from the least trace of poisonous material, but is generally pronounced far superior to any article heretofore in use. The great desideratum of safety and efficiency is thus attained, and ladies will find in "Camelline" an article exactly adapted to their requirements. Another preparation which has met with great favor is the celebrated "Aureoline," manufactured by this house, identical in composition with that of Robare, of London, and surpassing that article on account of being freshly manufactured, thus presenting its peculiar properties in a more active and efficient condition. As our lady readers know, a few applications of Wakelee's "Aureoline" changes the hair to that sunny golden hue, the theme of poets and an object of admiration to all lovers of the beautiful. Among the endless variety of toilet soaps displayed by this firm, one brand, in our estimation, stands preëminent. It is the "Savon Royal," from the manufactory of Eeckelaer, of Brussels, celebrated in Europe for its delicate perfume, the odor of the natural flower, and for all the qualities desired in soap for toilet use. Wakelee's Extra Cologne, although not new, demands attention, from the fact that connoisseurs in perfume claim that it equals in purity and permanence the famous colognes of Farina. Certain it is that many of the first families of San Francisco have for years used no other cologne, purchasing it by the gallon, while bottles of the various standard sizes in which it is sold are found upon the toilet tables of many of our city belles. Scarcely less popular are their satchel powders of varied perfumes, among which we noticed Musk, Jasmine, Violet, Heliotrope and Jockey Club. Among the large stock of hair and tooth brushes from the well-known Gosnell & Sons, and Prout & Harsant, of London, are to be seen some beautiful carved ivory brushes, mirrors and toilet sets, imported from Paris. Although this firm has long been noted for the success with which they cater to the refined tastes of their customers, by far the most important department of their business remains to be noted. We refer to their arrangements for the importation of pure drugs and chemicals direct from the leading manufacturers of the world, their extensive chemical laboratory for the manufacture of medicinal preparations, and the care used in dispensing upon physicians' prescriptions. Their books show that they have thus prepared since the establishment of their business over two million prescriptions, and we doubt whether there is another house in the United States having a similar record. Like all old Californians, we have long known this firm, and we say to those among our readers who desire anything new, rare and elegant in the way of toilet articles or perfumes, and those who appreciate absolute purity of material and skillful dispensing of medicines, to call upon H. P. Wakelee & Co.

THE BEST SEWING MACHINE.

"He who saves Labor saves Life."

No house is furnished complete without a Sewing Machine.

Get the Best! It is the Cheapest!

The Genuine "Singer" is the simplest, strongest, and best adjusted Machine ever made.

It is so simple that even a novice can sew with it.

It is so strong that it is next to impossible to break or injure it with ordinary usage. And, in addition, the latest improved Singer New Family Machine has been so perfected that it runs as easily and makes as little noise, when in operation, as the Toy Sewing Machines whose only merits are these qualities.

With every one of our New Family Sewing Machines we furnish attachments which render Hemming, Felling, Ruffling, Tucking, Cording, Binding, Hem Stitching, Trimming, Braiding and Embroidering, as easy and simple as plain stitching.

If popularity is a criterion of merit our record of 300,000 sales in 1878, (being more than the combined sales of all the other Sewing Machine Manufacturers in the United States) prove conclusively that the SINGER is the Best.
